PITTENWEEM AND ST. MONANCE.

PITTENWEEM is a royal burgh and sea-port, in the parish of its name; 24 miles N. N. E. from Edinburgh, 21 from Kirkcaldy, 5 S.S.W. from Crail, 10 S. from St. Andrews, and three and half miles from Kilconquhar (the last named the nearest railway station); situated on the cost of the Frith of Forth, one mile from Wester Anstruther, and occupying rather an elevated site of ground above the harbour. It consists of an irregular main street, with a few bye thoroughfares, the houses generally bearing an ancient aspect. The dwellings around the harbour are of a respectable appearance; and over this part of the town stand the remains of the priory of Pittenweem, the date of which is not with certainty known; exclusive of some fragments of the religious edifice, there is a quadrangular range of curious antique buildings entire, said to have been the residence of the prior, and other superior officers of the establishment. These remains exhibit a fine specimen of the domestic ecclesiastical architecture of the ages anterior to the Reformation. Adjacent to the monastic ruins stands the parish church, an old edifice with a turretted spire.

Pittenweem was constituted a royal burgh by James V, in 1537; it is governed by one provost, two baillies, a treasurer, and eight councillors; and joins with Cupar, St. Andrews, the Anstruthers, Crail, and Kilrenny, in sending one member to parliament. Between the period of Pittenweem being erected into a royal burgh and 1639, it should seem that it was a place of considerable note and trade; but, from the latter period to the year 1645, it suffered severely—no fewer than thirteen sail of large vessels, belonging to this port, having been either taken by the enemy or wrecked. It is now a fishing station of some importance; and fish curing is carried on rather extensively, in addition to which the trade in grain is of some consequence.

The places of worship are the parish church, and Episcopalian and United Presbyterian chapels, it contains also a parish and burgh school. It was at Pittenweem that the robbery was committed upon the collector of the excise by Wilson and Robertson, which led to the outrages of the Porteous mob and the consequent catastrophe; the house in which this transaction took place is still standing, on the north side of the street, north of the church.

The village or small town of St. MONANCE (or St. Monans) it one mile and a half from Pittenweem, on the same coast as the latter place. There is a small harbour attached to it, and at one period it was ranked amongst the most considerable fishing stations on the coast of Fife, and its inhabitants still pursue that avocation. St. Monance is a burgh of barony, governed by two baillies, a treasurer, a provost, and nine councillors. Lying away from the direct thoroughfare along the shore of the Forth, it is comparatively seldom visited, and is, therefore, only locally known. From the adjacent country its little church alone is visible, standing on the height above the houses, and so near to the sea as to be occasionally wet with its foam; it is a curious old Gothic edifice. Until the year 1646, the name of the parish was Abercrombie, or Inverny; its present name is derived from St. Monan, a martyr celebrated for his miracles in Fife and the adjacent Isle of May.

ST. ANDREWS.

IS a city, a royal burgh, and sea-port,—and perhaps the most interesting town, as regards its ecclesiastical history, in North Britain; 39 miles N.N.E. of Edinburgh, 10 miles from Cupar, Anstruther and Crail, and six from Leuchars, a station on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee railway. It stands within the bay to which it gives name—where in flow the river Eden, and a small stream called the Kinley. Its history is mingled with the civil and ecclesiastical annals of Scotland, especially the latter; but the narrow space within which the proprietor of this work is confined, in the descriptive notice of towns, denies to him the gratifying task of performing that ample justice to these subjects which their importance demands, and which have been so ably and so elaborately treated by the authors of the 'Gazetteer of Scotland.'

The city of St. Andrews in 1410 first saw the establishment of its university, which was the earliest of the kind in Scotland—it originated with Bishop Wardlaw, a magnificent and liberal minded prelate; in 1411 it was endowed by a charter. The college of St. Salvator was erected by Bishop Kennedy in 1456, that of St. Leonard in 1512, and that of St. Mary, or the divinity college, in 1537; in 1747 the institutions of St. Salvator and St. Leonard were united, by parliamentary statute. The university library contains upwards of sixty-three thousand volumes. The united college has a chancellor, a rector, and principal, with professors of Greek, logic, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, humanity, civil history, mathematics, and natural history. The college of St. Mary's is an institution of less consequence; it consists of a principal, and professors of divinity, church history, and oriental languages. The site of the new Madras college is on the south side of the South-street immediately behind and comprehending within it part of that fine old ruin the Black Friars, which will thus be associated with an improved system of education for centuries to come—uniting, tastefully and appropriately, something of the splendour of departed with much of the elegance and usefulness of present times. This noble institution, which was endowed by the late Dr. Bell, the distinguished founder of several similar establishments, both in this and in other towns of Scotland, cannot fail to secure to his memory, for ages to come, that veneration and esteem to which, as a benefactor of his race, he is so well entitled. The architectural plan was made by William Burn, Esq. architect, Edinburgh, and the foundation stone laid on the 9th April, 1832.

The town originally consisted of four streets: Swallow-street (which has for centuries disappeared), towards the sea; North-street, in which a number of elegant edifices are now erected, together with the buildings of the united college, partly old and partly new; Market-street, which runs through the middle of the town, and is deformed by a town-house and gaol, which occupy its centre, like the late 'Heart of Midlothian' in Edinburgh. This is shortly to be pulled down, as a new and more commodious building has been erected in South-street, opposite the town church; South-street, which is spacious and well paved, terminates towards the east in a beautiful view of the ruins of the cathedral, and towards the west in a fine arched entrance, being the old city gate. The streets all concentrate towards the old cathedral, and the still more ancient tower of Regulus, or, as it is more commonly called, 'St. Rule.' In this quarter still stands a great part of the magnificent wall reared by Prior John Hepburn in 1516: it runs along the south side of the town, and contains fourteen round and square towers, each having a niche on the outside for a saint; and appears one of the most interesting relics in the place. From the top of St. Regulus' tower there is a beautiful view of the Bell rock, the bay, the city, and the surrounding country. The ruins, rapidly decreasing, of the once formidable castle, the scene of Cardinal Beaton's cruelty to others and of his own assassination, lie towards the north-east, and jut out into the sea, which in another century will probably sweep them from the face of the earth. On the shore is a small eminence called the Witch-hill, the place where those convicted of witchcraft suffered. Near this spot is a monument raised in 1842 to the memory of the martyrs—Wishart, Mill and others; it is in the form of an obelisk, and is forty-five feet in height.

As before stated, St. Andrews is a royal burgh, by virtue of a charter conferred by David I. which was confirmed by Malcolm II., the unfortunate monarch who was slain at Glammis castle in 1034; the charter, together with the silver keys of the city, and the axe which was used for the decapitation of Sir Robert Spottiswoode and some other loyalists are still to be seen in the town house. The city is governed by a provost (elected triennially), a dean of guild and four bailies, with a treasurer. The burgh unites with Cupar, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, Pittenweem, and Crail, in sending one member to the imperial parliament. St. Andrews enjoyed at one period an extensive foreign trade, and so lately as the reign of Charles I. it owned from thirty to forty trading vessels. At present the chief trade is in coal. The harbour is small; the water is seven feet at ordinary tides, and fourteen at spring. A branch line of railway from the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee line, at a point near Milton, in the parish of Leuchars, was opened some years ago, under the title of the St. Andrews Railway Company. The length of the line is five miles, and the authorised capital £21,000. Four banking establishments are in useful operation here, namely—branches respectively of the 'Eastern Bank of Scotland,' of the 'Clydesdale Banking Company,' of the 'Royal Bank of Scotland,' and of the 'Bank of Scotland.' There are three principal inns—these are the Royal Hotel, in South-street, the Star and the Cross Keys in Market-street.

Nearly opposite St. Mary's college, on the north side of the street, stands the town church, erected in the twelfth century; it is in good preservation and repair, and is crowded with seats and galleries. Within the door, and on the right side is the superb monument of Archbishop Sharp, erected by his son in 1769: it is composed of white marble; the figure of the prelate is represented in the attitude of kneeling, and below is exhibited, in relief, the assassination of this ecclesiastical dignitary. It was thoroughly repaired in 1850, at an expense of upwards of £100. Besides the two parish churches, an additional one has been erected; there are also a Free church, and Episcopals United Presbyterian, Baptist, and Independent chapels, A golfing society was instituted here in 1754; it ha; always been well sustained by its respective members, who number between three hundred and four hundred; they hold two great meetings annually. St. Andrews, whether as regards its early importance in the history of Scotland, with which it is so intimately associated—its numerous relics of antiquity,, which everywhere arrest the eye—its venerable religious edifices, and its seminaries of learning—must be admitted to be a place possessing undying excellence to the mind of the antiquary, and replete with interest to the well-informed historian, the contemplative tourist, and the casual visitor. The market is held on Monday; and the fairs on the second Monday in April, the second Tuesday in August (old style), and the first Monday in November (new style).

POST OFFICE, 7, Union Street, George Cruickshank, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Edinburgh, Dundee, and all parts of North and South, every morning at ten, and in the evening at six, and are despatched thereto every morning at six, and in the afternoon at twenty-five minutes past two.

STRATHMIGLO AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STRATHMIGLO is a parish and small town—the latter nearly two miles from Auchtermuchty, eight from Kinross, and a station on the Fife and Kinross Railway, which runs close by the town, distant about five miles from Ladybank Station, a junction on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railways, situated in a pleasant plain, on the north bank of the Miglo or Eden; and consists chiefly of two streets, with several lanes diverging from them. The town house stands about the centre of the principal street: it has a square steeple, at the top of which is a balcony surrounded by balustrades, the whole being surmounted by a spire nearly eighty feet high; from the front of the steeple projects a stone pillar, which formerly served as sun-dial, now much defaced; above this are the arms of the house of Burleigh. By charter, in 1600, the detached portions or feus were erected into a burgh of barony, and this grant was confirmed by James VI, in 1605, but the nomination of baillies and admittance of burgesses was vested in the person of the superior. Within the last seventy years, a village has been built on the opposite side of the Miglo, called the FEUS OF WESTER-CASH. Between the old town and this new village is a beautiful square, and level meadow, called Town-green, intersected by the Miglo, and belonging to the burgh. There is but little trade belonging to the place—that which it does enjoy is of the nature with the staple of the county,—bleaching and linen weaving. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free Church, and two Presbyterian chapels. The first mentioned is a plain building, standing at the entrance of the town. A fair is held at Strathmiglo on the last Friday in June.

TORRYBURN WITH NEWMILLS (or LOWER TORRY),

CARNOCK, OAKLEY, AND CAIRNEYHILL.

TORRYBURN is a parish and village—the latter 17 miles S.W. from Kirkcaldy, 6 E. from Kincardine, 4½ W. from Dunfermline, and 2 E. from Culross; seated on Crombie point, a promontory on the Firth, and two miles and a half from the Oakley station, on the Stirling and Dunfermline line. The situation of the village is pleasant and salubrious, and the inhabitants, who are remarkable for their peaceable disposition and industrious habits, are chiefly employed in weaving, and some of the females are engaged in embroidering sewed muslins. From the rocky state of the shore it has been found impossible to form a harbour here; but a pier has been erected at Crombie point, where passengers and goods are landed, and at which steamboats touch in going to Granton, Alloa, and Stirling. The parish lies at the south-west corner of the county, and extends along the shore of the Frith of Forth, between the parish of Dunfermline on the east, and that of Culross on the west, and measures from four to five miles in length, by about two in breadth. The parish, which is formed by the union of the baronies of Torry and Crombie, derives its name from the Gaelic word Torry, signifying the 'King's Height,' and burn, the Scottish word for rivulet. Within the boundary of the parish and adjacent to Torryburn village is that of NEWMILLS, or LOWER TORRY, which for trade, or otherwise, demands no particular notice. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches and a parochial school. A fair is held at Torryburn on the second Wednesday in July.

CARNOCK parish lies to the north of Torryburn—the village being situated 4 miles W. from Dunfermline; there is no business of consequence carried on here, but the parish contains coal in abundance. A church of the establishment, and a Free Church, are the places of worship.

OAKLEY and CAIRNEYHILL are two villages in the parish of Carnock—the first named, which is about a mile from Carnock village, has sprung into existence since the year 1846, owing to the establishment of the 'Forth Iron Works.' The ore and fuel are raised at the works, and seven furnaces are continually in operation in smelting; and two engines employed, of the power respectively of two hundred horses. Schools have been opened by the proprietors for the children of their workpeople. The railway before-mentioned passes close to the works. CAIRNEYHILL village is situated on the road between Alloa and Dunfermline, 3 miles west from the latter town; and the majority of the inhabitants are employed by the manufacturers of that place. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches at Carnock, and a United Presbyterian chapel at Cairneyhill.

POST OFFICE, TORRYBURN, James Brimer, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from DUNFERMLINE) every forenoon at half-past twelve, and are despatched thereto at two in the afternoon. Nearest Money Order Office, Culross.

POST OFFICE, CARNOCK, James Pye, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from DUNFERMLINE) every forenoon at twelve, and are despatched thereto at seven in the evening. Nearest Money Order office, Dunfermline.

WEMYSS (East & West), BUCKHAVEN & METHIL.

East Wemyss in the parish of its name is five miles from Kirkcaldy, and four from Dysart: situated on the Frith of Forth, and consists principally of a single street. In this village the manufacture of linen fabrics is carried on rather extensively; and a brewery and malting-house are the other branches. Free and established churches are in the village; also Parochial and Free Church schools.

About one mile westward is the village of West Wemyss, a burgh of barony, having a harbour at its western extremity, and several vessels belonging to it employed in the exportation of coal, which is wrought close to the harbour. A short way, east of the village on the brink or face of an eminence, and surrounded on the land side by beautiful plantations and pleasure grounds, is Wemyss Castle, the seat of the late Admiral Wemyss, now of his son, James H. Erskine Wemyss, Esq., M. P. for the county, elected for the first time, 1859; and within the parish is the ancient castle of Macduff, now a ruin. This massive structure crowns the height above the shore, commanding a most extensive view seaward; it has the reputation of being one of the castles of the Macduffs, Earls of Fife. Near the castle are several extensive excavations at the base of the bank, partly natural and partly artificial—one of these caves is called the 'King's Cave.' A chapel of ease is the only place of worship.

Buckhaven is a village one mile east from Wemyss, here a harbour has been constructed, for the accommodation of boats engaged in the fishing station, which is considerable on this coast. The expense of this great improvement up to the present date exceeds £16,000, This village, as well as that of the decayed town of Methil, are principally inhabited by fishermen and weavers; at the latter also is a small harbour and fish-curing is carried on at Buckhaven to a large extent. A fair is held at Wemyss on the second Wednesday in September.

FORFARSHIRE,

OR ANGUS.—This county is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, on the west by Perthshire, on the north by the counties of Aberdeen and Kincardine, the latter lying also on its north-eastern verge; on the south, the Firth of Tay is its boundary, as likewise is Perthshire for a short distance: its extent from north to south is about thirty-seven miles, and from east to west nearly forty. The figure of this county is, perhaps, the most uniform of any in Scotland; and but for an indentation on its western side, caused by the intrusion of a part of Perthshire, it would describe almost a perfect square. The contents of its area has been variously estimated; the government returns for 1851 stated it to contain 889 square miles, or 568,750 statute acres; of these there are about three hundred thousand cultivated, and two hundred and sixty thousand uncultivated; the portion occupied by lakes is inconsiderable.

EARLY HISTORY.—The district of ANGUS (now Forfarshire), with the contiguous county of Kincardine on the north, anciently formed the country of the Horesti, and a portion of the Pictish kingdom. On the dissolution of that government by Kenneth II. about the end of the ninth century, he is said to have divided it between his two brothers, Angus and Mearns, from whom the two counties derived their appellation. The district gave the title of Earl to two different families: on the extinction of the first, the earldom was conferred on a relation of King David Bruce; and in 1477 it merged in the family of the Douglasses: it has since devolved on the Duke of Hamilton. There are a number of old ruinous castles in this county, most of which have fallen to decay, in consequence of the baronies on which they stand having passed into the hands of proprietors of other estates.

SOIL, SURFACE, AND PRODUCE.—The great level valley of Strathmore runs through the centre of the county from east to west; and the lines of hills which flank this extensive and fine tract of country, with the Grampians on the north, and some minor ranges on the south, may be said to form this district into a series of continuous ridges, generally pursuing a direction from west to east, interrupted occasionally by the different rivers and streams coursing to the sea. The eminences of greatest altitude in this shire are—Hill of Dundee, 525; Dunnichen Hill, 720; Belmont, 759; Sidlaw, 1,406; Craigowl, 1,600; Oathlaw, one of the Grampians, 2,264; and Mount-Battock, 3,465 feet above the level of the sea. The portion of the Grampian mountains in this shire is diversified by many beautiful valleys; and from the summit of these elevations to the ocean on the east, and the Tay on the south, the surface of the land may be considered an inclined plane. From the ærial region of the highest Grampian an extensive and well-varied prospect is presented, not only of almost the whole country adjoining the Tay, and of the ocean, but of the eastern part of the peninsula of Fife, the coast of East Lothian, and the heights of Lammermoor. The capabilities of Forfarshire for agriculture continued for centuries in that dormant state which characterised most other parts of Scotland; but it cannot escape observation, at the present day, that this district is completely emancipated from the reproach of inattention to husbandry; that it now exhibits a lively spirit and practically enlightened system of farming, and consequently a just appreciation of the advantages of this most useful of all sciences. Within the last sixty years, the farmers of this county have kept at least equal pace, in the improvements adopted, with those of similarly situated divisions of the country; and the wealth of Forfarshire has been steadily increasing both from its agricultural and its manufacturing products. The general drainage of the land has been proceeded in to a great and beneficial extent; and several lochs, particularly that of Rescobie, have been drawn off, for the purpose of obtaining shell-marl, which has long been in high repute with the agriculturists in their respective neighbourhoods; the introduction of bone manure has been followed by the most profitable results. The sowing of permanent pasture grasses and turnips is persevered in to a broad and lucrative amount; and the quantity of ground appropriated to tillage is annually augmenting. The improvement of live stock has been in proportional advance with that of cultivation, and has been materially facilitated by the zealous co-operation of the various agricultural societies. In traversing the lower parts of the shire, beautiful enclosures and plantations meet the eye in every parish; and by the formation of excellent roads, in all directions, a pleasing inducement is now held for travelling through this progressively prospering county. The planting of waste lands in this county seems to have made very little progress till about the middle of the last century, and when, at length, this sure source of future profit suggested itself, Scotch firs were the only sort of trees planted in such situations. More recent planters introduced the larch, as a more valuable species of timber, and adapted, as they thought, to every variety of soil and situation, but experience has now exploded this latter notion; for, it has been profitably proved that, by the operation of draining, the moors and waste lands produce excellent oak and beech, of which a number of proprietors have planted extensively. From the mouth of the Tay to near the Westhaven, the coast is sandy—having, from thence eastward, many sunken rocks. Within a mile to the east of Arbroath the shore becomes bold and rocky, presenting dreadful precipices to the sea, perforated with caverns by the incessant and insidious workings of the waves: the 'Redhead,' a promontory upwards of two hundred feet in perpendicular height, is the most striking feature of this rocky front; it forms the south point of Lunan Bay, and exposes a beautiful beach to the ocean for nearly three miles. The fisheries of Forfarshire are of great importance; those of the North and South Esk, and the coast of the county, are at the present time very valuable; and the mode of packing salmon in boxes of ice, for the London market, is a practice which has proved of peculiar advantage to those connected with that branch of the fishery.

MANUFACTURES AND MINERALS.—The manufactures of Forfar are of very high consequence; and, as Fifeshire is celebrated for the production of the finer linen fabrics, so is this county noted for the manufacture of the coarser hempen goods, wrought up from foreign materials: the spinning of yarn in large mills is carried on to a prodigious extent. Dundee, Arbroath, and Montrose, are its principal trading ports: the two first named enjoy pre-eminence in the making of sailcloths, Osnaburghs, sackings, dowlases, and other linen textures; Brechin participates largely with other places in the preparation of flax; and the towns of Forfar, Montrose, and Kerriemuir, are seats of material manufacturing importance. Exclusive of these particular stations, the inhabitants of all the little towns and villages are industriously employed in weaving the already prepared materials into cloth, and in the process of bleaching. This county is not distinguished for its mineral treasures. Of limestone, which is found in various parts, there are immense tracts in the Grampians; but, from the expense of conveying coal to burn it, this natural product, so valuable under other circumstances, is not wrought to any extent, except in the neighbourhood of Montrose, at Buddin (on the north side of Lunan Bay), and in the vicinity of Brechin. Freestone is plentiful in almost every parish; the colour is various, but in no instance so white and beautiful as the stone of Fife or Mid-Lothian. The Arbroath paving-stone is well known, and has a ready sale in London and Edinburgh. Lead has been found in several places, and was at one time wrought to a limited amount in the parish of Lochlee. But, unfortunately for its local interests this county is destitute of coal—at least no vestige of this invaluable fossil has yet been discovered; the whole district is, therefore, dependant on the Fife and Newcastle collieries for this essential article of domestic comfort and manufacturing facility.

Rivers, Lochs and Railways.—The principal rivers are the North and South Esk, which rise near each other on the northern confines of the county; the former originates from Loch Lee, which is filled by the water of the Lee, after being joined by the Unich, which latter forms several beautiful cascades. The tributaries of the North Esk are the Luther, the Cruick, the West Water, the Tarf, and the Mark; enriched with these streams, it falls into the sea three miles from Montrose. The South Esk passes through the centre of the county, receiving in its progress the contributory waters of the Noran, the Lemno, the Carity, and the Prosen; and enters the ocean at Montrose. The third river in point of size is the Isla, which rises near the sources of the Esks: it receives, near Meigle, the Dean—the Carleet, a little above Glammis—and the romantic burn of Glammis, near the castle; and, turning westward into Perthshire, it joins the Tay at Kinclaven. There are also two lesser rivers, the Dighty and the Lunan: the former proceeds from some small lakes in the parish of Lundie, and falls into the mouth of the Tay, east from Broughty-ferry; the latter conveys the water of the lakes of Rescobie and Balgives to the sea, at Lunan bay: the Lunan is famous for its eels, and the other rivers abound with different variations of the trout and salmon. In the enumeration of rivers yielding wealth to this county, the Tay must not be omitted (though this district cannot claim its origin), being by far the most valuable from its adaptation to the purposes of commerce: it has its source in the western extremity of Perthshire, and after winding through delightful scenery, the beauties of which are heightened by its sparkling waters, it becomes an estuary or firth; and about eight miles below Dundee it expands into the bay of St. Andrews, and loses its distinction in the wide reservoir of the German Ocean. The lakes of most consequence are Loch Lee, in the parish of its name; Loch Brandy, in the parish of Clova; the Loch of Forfar, near that town; the Lochs of Roscobie, of Lundie, and Lentrathen, in the respective parishes so denominated; and of Balgives, in the parish of Aberlemno. None of these are of great magnitude—indeed few, if any, are more than a mile in extent; and there is nothing peculiar in their qualities or situations. Forfarshire is included in an extensive line of railway communication—and it may be said that every town of note in the shire is visited by a main line or branch from it: they are, the Dundee, and Arbroath; the Dundee and Perth; the Dundee and Newtyle; the Arbroath and Forfar; the Scottish Midland; the Scottish North Eastern; and a branch from the Aberdeen line to Montrose, &c.

Divisions, &c.—Forfarshire comprises fifty-two complete parishes, and four parts of parishes; in which are five royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Brechin, and Forfar: the four last-named burghs, with Inverbervie (in Kincardineshire), unite in sending one member to the senate; the town of Dundee also returns one, and the county at large another.

ABERLEMNO, CARESTON, FEARN, MENMUIR,

STRICKATHROW AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ABERLEMNO parish lies on the banks of the South Esk, and about twelve miles from the sea-coast. The land is undulating and fertile, and agriculture is pursued with spirit and success. There are several quarries in the parish, from which are obtained good pavement stones and gray slates, and which employ a good many of the inhabitants. In the parish churchyard, which is about six miles south-west from Brechin, is an antique obelisk, covered with hieroglyphics, and also a little to the north of the Parish church are three antique obelisks, two of which are also covered with hieroglyphics, which are supposed to have been erected to commemorate a signal victory obtained over the Danes near this place. Antiquarians, however, are not agreed as to the design for which they were erected. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about two miles north east from the church are also the ruins of Melgund Castle, which is supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. What is called the "vitrified Fort of Finhaven" is about a mile west from the Parish church. It has attracted much the attention of antiquarians of late, but the mode of its construction and the use for which it was designed, and the era to which it belongs, still remains a mystery.

The small parish of CARESTON (or Caraldston) lies between Brechin and Tannadice, on the north bank of the South Esk and of the Noran water. The land is composed of beautiful well-cultivated braes, sloping to the south. In the parish are two artificial mounds; one is said to have been raised for judicial deliberations, the other for the execution of capital offenders.

FEARN (or Fern) parish lies at the foot of some of the Grampian hills, is intersected by the Cruick water, and bound on the south by that of Noran. The surface presents rich pastoral hills, and low grounds finely cultivated and enclosed; with extensive plantations of fir and other timber. Near the Noran stands the formerly celebrated "Vane Castle," now a ruinous empty skeleton; it is about six miles west of Brechin.

The parish of MENMUIR is about five miles long and two broad, and lies about five miles north west from Brechin. The southern part is flat, and forms the vale of the Cruick water; to the north it is hilly and healthy. It is about four miles N. from Brechin.

STRICKATHROW parish is about seven miles long and two broad; corn and black cattle are the principal products. The churchyard, which is about four miles from Brechin, is said to have been the scene of the surrender of the crown of Scotland, by John Baliol, to Edward I., in 1296; in the same cemetery are three tombstones, said by tradition to mark the graves of three Danish generals. In the north-western part of the parish rises the conspicuous hill of Lundie.

TANNADICE is situated nearly in the centre of the county, extending about twelve miles in length by from four to eight in breadth. Along the western border of the parish passes the South Esk river, and on the eastern side courses the Noran water; on the banks of these streams the land is finely enclosed, cultivated and planted, and exhibits a variety of romantic scenes. The village of Tannadice is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Esk, seven miles and a half west from Brechin.

ARBROATH,

FORMERLY called Aberbrothock, is a royal burgh, a sea-port and the seat of a presbytery; 60 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 18 S. S. E. from Dundee, 15 S.E. from Forfar, and 12 S. from Montrose; situated on a small plain, on the coast of the German ocean, and surrounded on the west, north and east by eminences, in an amphitheatric form. This is a town of early origin, owing its rise to an important monastic institution, founded here by William the Lion, about the year 1178: the remains of this edifice are strikingly picturesque, and consists of ruinous towers of the most solid construction, columns overthrown and broken in pieces, Gothic windows, cloisters, staircases, &c.; all exhibiting the ravages of time. The church of this abbey has been a most magnificent fabric; a part of the abbot's lodgings, which stands a little distance from the church, still remains. The monks first came from Kelso, and Reginaldus (a monk of Tyron), was its first abbot. The abbots of this foundation had privileges which others did not enjoy—they were exempted from assisting at the yearly synods, and had the distinction of making use of, and wearing the pontifical ornaments. King Robert the Bruce granted ten marks sterling to the abbey; and King John conferred on the inhabitants of the place the same privileges that his subjects enjoyed throughout all England, except in his city of London.

The town consists of one main street, nearly half a mile in length, running north and south from the sea, and several parallel ones that intersect others at right angles. Eastward of the town, and locally in the parish of Saint Vigeans, there are several elegant streets, at the top of one of which a chapel of ease is erected; on the west side of the river Brothock are also other streets of modern erection, consisting chiefly of small houses, forming a suburb of considerable size. In 1812 a new town-house was erected, and in 1855 at the rere of it in an open space a very handsome and commodious market house, was built by the magistrates, and town council, at an outlay of about £.7,000 these together with several other buildings, numerous new churches and places of worship add much to the appearance of the town; the streets have also been greatly improved, and are daily improving, by superior paving and sewerage and by the addition of elegantly fitted and well supplied shops. At the commencement of the eighteenth century Arbroath had no other trade than that of fishing, nor did it claim any notice as a place of manufacture. Nothing was then directly imported except a small cargo of wood occasionally from Norway; flax, iron and other useful commodities were purchased from the merchants of Dundee and Montrose. About the year 1738, the manufacture of coarse linens was introduced by the following accident; a weaver in the town, having a small quantity of flax, unfit for the kind of cloth then usually brought to market, made it into a web, and offered it to another of the inhabitants at a price by which he was willing to be a loser; the purchaser, having previously been in Germany, remarked a similarity between this piece of cloth and the manufacture of Osnaburgh, and prevailed upon the weaver to make trial of other webs of the same texture; the experiment succeeded—a company was established, and other parts of the county soon availed themselves of the discovery. The staple of Arbroath, at the present day, is the manufacture of sail cloth, canvass and other coarse linens; the preparation and spinning of the yarns for these productions of the loom is carried on extensively, by many firms, and individuals of the first respectability. In consequence of the financial pressure, which swept over Europe, and America, in the latter end of 1857, and in the early part of the following year—the manufacturing interest in this town was severely crippled, several extensive failures took place in it, paralizing its trade to an incredible extent, but this evil is happily disappearing fast, and indications of increasing prosperity are being steadily developed. In addition to these important branches, there are various other concerns of magnitude, including iron foundries, a ship-building yard (a patent slip), two extensive tanneries, roperies, several breweries, &c.; and a considerable trade exists in the exportation of grain. The number of vessels belonging to the port on the 31st of December 1858, was 103, with an aggregate burthen of 13,919 tons. In 1850, there were 122 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 13,569, so that although there has been a diminution in the number of vessels, there has been an increase in the amount of tonnage, and there is every prospect of a continued increase-considering that in the interval between 1850 and 1858, the shipping interest was generally depressed. The amount of revenue belonging to the port, from December 1857, to December 1858, was £12,184. The harbour is commodious, having been much enlarged at a cost of £50,000, which sum was chiefly raised amongst its merchants and spirited inhabitants. It is provided with a neat signal-tower for communication with the Bell (or Inch Cape) Rock, rising from the German ocean, about twelve miles in a south-eastern direction from Arbroath. Of this rock, and the tradition attached to it, a most entertaining account will be found in Messrs. Chamber's 'Gazetteer.' On 'the rock' is a lighthouse, the first stone of which was laid in July, 1808, and the beacon first gleamed over the deep on the 1st February, 1811. At the lighthouse there are a principal light-keeper and three assistants; each, in his turn, goes on shore at the end of every six weeks, with liberty to remain a fortnight. In the town there are buildings erected where each keeper has apartments for the accommodation of his family; and connected with the establishment is a very neat signal-tower in the harbour; this structure is fifty feet in height, and furnished with an excellent telescope; and signals are arranged with the persons at the lighthouse for the attending vessel, the master of which has charge of the signal-tower and of the stores at Arbroath. The monetary transactions of the place are facilitated by four banking establishments—branches respectively of the 'British Linen Company,' the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Royal Bank,' and the Bank of Scotland;' and there is a bank for savings, well sustained by many provident depositors. There are numerous inns, and several news-rooms, and libraries.

Arbroath is a very ancient royalty; but there is no certainty as to the origin of its burghal privileges, in consequence of the loss of charters; in the incessant troubles which disordered the state during the minority of James VI.: it is the general opinion, however, that the town was constituted a royal burgh by the same monarch that founded its celebrated abbey. It is governed by a provost (James Anderson Dickson, Esq.), three baillies, a dean of guild, and thirteen town councillors, and it has seven incorporated trades, viz. hammermen, glovers, shoe makers, weavers, tailors, wrights, and bakers, besides two incorporations of seamen, and brewers, and the Guildry Incorporation. It unites with Forfar, Montrose and Brechin in sending one member to the imperial parliament. W. E. Baxter, Esq. is the present member. A burgh or bailie court, a justice of peace court, and a police court, are held weekly, and a sheriff's court every alternate month, for the recovery of debts not exceeding £12. 0s. 0d.

There are no fewer than eighteen places of worship in the town and suburbs of Arbroath; their names, denominations and respective sites, with the ministers officiating, are given at a subsequent page. An elegant steeple one hundred and fifty feet in height was, not many years since, added to the church. There are several excellent public educational establishments in Arbroath, including the 'Arbroath Academy,' a subscription one, another under the 'Benevolent Society,' the 'Educational Institution,' and some private academies, for either sex, of great respectability. The local charities include four mortifications, viz. Carmichaels, founded 1738, out of which the widows of seven shipmasters get a division half yearly; Colvills founded 1812, out of which £60 annually is expended on the education of ten poor children; £10 to the Scotch Episcopal clergyman; £10 to the poor of Arbroath; the like sum to the poor of St. Vigeans, and the residue of to twenty poor householders; Dove's, founded in 1841, for the education of native born boys' of poor parentage, and Mrs. Renny Strachan's, which amounts to £50 yearly, to be expended in purchasing coals and oatmeal for distribution at Christmas, amongst the most necessitous poor. John Macdonald, Esq. is clerk to Carmichael's, Colvill's, and Mrs. Renny Strachans, mortification. The market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the last Saturday in January, for general business and hiring servants; on the first Saturday after Whit-Sunday for hiring, July 18th (if it fall on a Saturday, if not, on the following Saturday), for general business and hiring; and the first Saturday after Martinmas for hiring.

AUCHTERHOUSE, LIFF AND BENVIE, LUNDIE, MAINS,

STRATHMARTIN, MURROES, AND TEALING.

THE parish of AUCHTERHOUSE lies in the south-west corner of the county, about 7 miles N.W. from Dundee, and on the south of the Sidlaw hills. The road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire) passes through the parish, which comprises four thousand acres, chiefly of arable land.

LIFF and BENVIE is an united parish, the latter incorporated with the former in 1758. The district, which lies immediately west of Dundee, with a portion touching the Tay, is generally well cultivated, and beneath the surface, freestone and slate abound. There are, within the parishes, the village of LIFF, BENVIE, INVERGOWRIE, and LOCHEE, the population of these parishes being upwards of 20,000, but of this number a great portion are included in the west of Dundee.

LUNDIE parish lies in the western part of the county; the parish of Foulis-Easter, in Perthshire, was united to it in 1618. Conjunctly the district forms a well cultivated and productive tract of country, embellished with plantations and irrigated by several small lakes, of which Lundie loch is one. The church of Foulis, which was founded by Sir Andrew Gray for a provost and some prebendaries, is still perfectly entire, although it was built in the year 1142.

MAINS, formerly called Strathdighty, is a parish lying immediately north of that of Dundee, and chiefly in the vale of the river Dighty, which intersects the parish into two nearly equal parts in its course to the Tay. From the banks of the stream the ground rises gently to the north and south; and the country has a most pleasant aspect. On the Dighty are several mills; and near the north bank of the river is the extensive bleachfield of Claverhouse—at no great distance from which was the seat of General Grahame, whose title of 'Claverhouse' (applied from this his patrimonial estate) once sounded such alarm in Scotland. The Grahames of Fintry were one of the oldest families in this part of the country. Freestone and slate quarries supply some occupation in this parish. The small parish of STRATHMARTIN is now united to that of Mains.

MURROES parish is in the southern part of the county, bounded by Dundee on the south and Monifieth on the east; lying on the road from Brechin to Dundee, from which latter it is about five miles distant. The greater part of the parish is arable, and it is now adorned with some plantations.

TEALING parish lies on the south side of the Sidlaw chain; is about four miles in length, and from one to two in breadth, and is watered by the small river Fithie, a tributary stream to the Dighty. In this parish are found grey slate, moorstone and freestone. John Glass, founder of the sect appropriately denominated 'Glassites,, was minister of Tealing anterior to his open separation from the church of Scotland.

BARRIE, CARNOUSTIE, PANBRIDE, MUIRDRUM,
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BARRIE (or Barry) is a parish and village—the latter is situated 10 miles E. from Dundee, and not quite that distance S.W. from Arbroath, on the road from the latter town to Broughty. While the parish is generally sandy, and abounds with tumuli, indicative of the visits and conflicts of the northern invaders on this coast, it has many large farms, all of them in the highest state of cultivation. Along the shore are placed lighthouses, to guide vessels on their entrance into the Tay. Besides Barrie, there is within the parish the thriving village of CARNOUSTIE, a pleasant sea-bathing place, now much resorted to in the summer months by visitors from Dundee and many of the inland towns of Scotland, and containing a large linen manufactory, employing upwards of three hundred hands; also an extensive vitriol works, belonging to Tennant & Co., of Glasgow. It has a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank.

PANBRIDE parish joins that of Barrie on the S.W., and runs about four and a half miles inland from the German ocean. It contains the villages of PANBRIDE or NEWTON. It is, properly speaking, a part of Carnoustie, a small burn only dividing them and MUIRDRUM. In its northern part stands the house of Panmure, with its extensive enclosures and plantations. The inhabitants of this parish are principally engaged in fishing and agricultural labour. The parish is watered by a streamlet that runs through a valley called 'Battie's Den,' over which is thrown a high bridge, on the turnpike road from Dundee to Arbroath. The coast is flat and rocky, but has two open harbours at the East and West Havens, where small vessels may discharge their cargoes in mild weather.

POST OFFICE, CARNOUSTIE, Betsy Lowson, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from all parts SOUTH every morning at six minutes past two—and letters from all parts NORTH and SOUTH at forty minutes past ten in the morning, and at fifty-four minutes past four in the afternoon, and are despatched to all parts at six minutes past two in the morning, and at fifty-four minutes past four in the afternoon.

 On Sunday letters are delivered at the window only, from nine to ten in the morning,
The Money Order Office is open from nine in the morning till six in the evening.

POST OFFICE, MUIRDRUM, Thomas Smith, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at thirty minutes past eight in the morning, and at six in the evening, and are despatched at ten minutes past six in the morning, and forty minutes past three in the afternoon.

BRECHIN

AND THE PARISH OF EDZELL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BRECHIN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parash; 70 miles N. from Edinburgh, 27 N. N. E. from Dundee, 25 S. S. W. from Stonehaven, between 12 and 13 N. E. from Forfar, and 8 W. by N. from Montrose, situated at the side of a hill, the foot of which is washed by the South Esk, and on the Aberdeen railway, for which line there is a station here. The town consists of one main street, with several smaller ones diverging; the principal is about a mile in length, extending from the north part to the picturesque bridge of two arches. Some of the streets, particularly about the Cross, are remarkably steep Brechin more than once suffered by the incursions of invaders and the broils of civil war; it was burnt by the Danes in 1012, and in 1645 it was subjected to a similar calamity by the Marquis of Montrose; two years afterwards it was nearly depopulated by that dreadful scourge the plague. Formerly the town was walled; but the gates have been long removed, and in the present day it exhibits the appearance of a well-built thriving place. Flax spinning and the manufacture of of linens, employ numerous hands. There are two manufactories for tobacco, and two distilleries on a large scale; malt is the basis of the spirit produce from the latter. Branches of the 'British Linen Company's Bank,' the 'City of Glasgow Bank,' and the 'Union Bank of Scotland,' are established here, and there is also a Savings' Bank. There are many excellent inns in the town. A newspaper, published here on Tuesday morning, entitled the 'Brechin Advertiser,' is conducted with much talent. The antiquity of Brechin as a royal burgh is of remote date; it is governed by a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master, and seven other councillors. The burghs joins with Forfar, Montrose, Arbroath, and Inverbervie, in returning one member to parliament. A burgh or baillie court is held every Wednesday—the baillies are the judges.

In ancient times an Abbey of Culdees existed here; and in 1150, when Brechin was constituted an episcopal see by David I., it is supposed that the site of this establishment was that selected for the foundation of the cathedral. An interesting fragment remains of the ancient chapel of the Maison Dieu. The cathedral of St. Ninian, which now forms the parish church, stands on the north verge of a precipitous ravine, which separates the burgh lands from those of Brechin castle; it was originally a stately Gothic structure, but its architectural symmetry has been materially injured by the injudicious taste displayed in modern repairs; the length is one hundred and sixteen feet, and the breadth sixty-one; the steeple is a square erection, seventy feet in height, surmounted by a hexagonal spire of fifty feet. The cathedral of Brechin was one of the few places of worship in which the service of the liturgy was for some time performed without interruption after its promulgation in 1637. The bishop was a man of singularly strong and daring character, and ascended the pulpit with a pair of pistols under his gown, determined to carry the behests of royalty into execution at whatever risk. The other places of worship are two handsome Free churches, three United Presbyterian, an original Secession and a Scottish Episcopal. Contiguous to the cathedral stands the tall slender tower of Brechin, which, like its prototype at Abernethy, and numerous others in Ireland, has puzzled so many antiquaries as to the object of its erection. It is an unadorned turret of freestone, eighty-five in height to the cornice, and fifteen feet more to the pinnacle of the modern spire on its top; it has several windows (four in particular, at the top, facing the cardinal points), but, like the tower of Abernethy, has no stairs within. The entrance to the tower is by a door near the ground, on the outside, which was built up, but has lately been reopened, and the whole edifice repaired by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. Numerous figures in an antique style of carving, and a rude representation of the crucifixion, are the surrounding ornaments of the door. The diameter of the tower at the bottom is sixteen feet. Between the town and the river, and only separated from the former by the ravine before-mentioned, stands Brechin Castle, the ancient seat of the Maules of Panmure, now the property and residence of the Right Hon. Lord Panmure; it is built on a precipitous rock overhanging the stream, and was formerly a fortress, having sustained a siege of twenty days in 1303, from the English army under Edward I., but Sir Thomas Maule, its proprietor, being killed, it surrendered. The south front, towards the river, presents a confused mass of buildings, consisting of some remains of the original structure with some more recent erections; the west front is formed with regularity, in the style of the seventeenth century, with round towers at the angles.

Brechin has the advantage of numerous educational seminaries, and these have stimulated even the humble classes to the acquisition of knowledge, which is ministered to them by means of several excellent public libraries, the volumes of which are in active demand. The chief architectural ornament of the town is the elegant building containing the principal schools, and the mechanics' institution. The front is in the Tudor style, with castellated parapet, ornamented with pinnacles; a fine tower rises in the centre to the height of eighty or ninety feet, from the summit of which there is an enchanting prospect. This elegant structure was erected at the sole cost of Lord Panmure, who also presented to the institution numerous valuable paintings, which grace the fine hall of the mechanics' institution. His lordship's munificence granted also £1,000 to be invested at interest, which yields about £40 a year, and is appropriated to enriching the library with books and the support of courses of lectures; and the subscribers are entitled to the benefit of the whole, for the low payment of three shillings a year. This town has given birth to several individuals of genius and literary distinction, among whom may be enumerated—Maitland, the laborious historian of Edinburgh and London; Dr. Gillies, the historian of Greece; and James Tytler, an eccentric and unfortunate person, well known for his contributions to the first edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' Trinity Muir, one mile north of the town, besides being the site of several great fairs, is resorted to by cricket and golf players during the summer, and the spectators would enjoy both the games and the fine prospect much more if a few seats were provided for them. The market is held on Tuesday, and the fairs (held on Trinity Muir) the third Wednesday in April, the second Wednesday in June, the second Thursday in August, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in September. The great sheep, cattle, and horse fair (on Trinity Muir) commences on the second Wednesday in June, and continues for three days—this is one of the largest in Scotland. 'Croft' markets, for cattle, are held in the town, and horse markets, also, towards the end of February and beginning of March.

EDZELL is a large parish, chiefly in this county and a small portion in Kincardineshire; it is fourteen miles in length, and approaches within six miles of Brechin. The ruins of the ancient castle of Edzell is the chief object of interest. A church of the establishment, and a parochial and Free church school are in the parish.

BROUGHTY-FERRY AND MONIFIETH.

BROUGHTY-FERRY is a considerable modern village, seated on the Frith of Tay, about four miles east from Dundee, nearly opposite to Ferry-port-on-Craig, and on the Dundee and Arbroath railway. The place takes its name from the old ruined castle of Broughty, or Burgh-Tay ('the defence of the Tay'), situate at its eastern extremity, on a rocky eminence jutting into the water; the only remains of this castle are the fragments of a tower and some vestiges of the battlements. Broughty is divided into two districts, East Ferry and West Ferry—the former is in the parish of Monifieth; the latter in that of Dundee: it is regularly built, and has improved very considerably during the last few years, having become the place of residence of many of the principal bankers and merchants of Dundee, whose pleasant houses and cottages are thickly scattered on the hill side, and along Monifieth road, many large and good shops have lately been built, and a branch of the Dundee Bank established. Fifty or sixty years ago, the East Ferry comprised only a few fishermen's huts, built along the beach; the population is now considerable, while people from the north of Scotland, Perth, and other parts of the country visit here during the summer months to enjoy its pleasant scenery, pure air, and for the sake of its excellent bathing accommodation. There are no public works here, the inhabitants being chiefly engaged in fishing, except a few tradesmen, and those who are independent of manual labour. About half a mile to the north of Broughty-Ferry is Fort-hill, where were lately some remains of the fortifications erected by the English, in 1548, during the reign of Henry VIII, and regency of the Earl of Arran, when they ravaged Dundee and the surrounding country; in 1550 the works on this hill, being surrendered to an allied army of Scots, Germans and French, under M. Des Thermes, were dismantled, and at the present day they present merely shattered relics, the plough having occasionally been driven over a part of the ground which they once covered. There are four places of worship, and several schools in the village.

The parish of MONIFIETH lies on the shore of the Frith of Tay, extending inland about four miles and a half; the name is understood to be derived from the Gaelic appellation of Monifuith, or the stag moss.' The village of Monifieth is situated about two miles east from Broughty-Ferry, on a brae with a southern exposure, at no great distance from the sea; it contains two manufactories of machines, and a flour mill, It has a parish, and a Free church. The parish church, though plain in appearance, is a conspicuous edifice, surrounded by a burying ground, containing a variety of finely carved antique tombstones, executed with a taste rarely seen in the cemetery of a humble village.

DUNDEE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF INVERGOWRIE, BULLIONFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNDEE is an important royal burgh and sea-port, ranging along the north bank of the Firth of Tay, about twelve miles from its mouth; it is 43 miles N. from Edinburgh, 66 S.S.W. from Aberdeen, 29 S.W. from Montrose, 23 E. by N. from Perth, 17 S.W. from Arbroath, and 14 S. from Forfar. Several railway companies have their stations in the town, or contiguous to it—they are respectively for the 'Dundee and Edinburgh,' the 'Dundee, Perth and Aberdeen,' the 'Dundee and Newtyle,' and the 'Dundee, Arbroath and North,' lines. The situation of this busy port is very beautiful: the noble river here forms a bay two miles broad, from the margin of which the town spreads itself over a gradual acclivity, ascending towards the base of a lofty and sheltering eminence, called 'Dundee Law; the picturesque coast of Fifeshire forms the southern border of the Tay, and a steam ferry-boat effects an hourly communication between the opposite shores of the estuary.

The earliest authentic accounts of Dundee do not satisfy the inquirer as to the origin either of its name or its existance; tradition ascribes the latter to a vow of David Earl of Huntingdon, in the latter part of the twelfth century, which caused a church to be erected on the site occupied by the present edifice, in the Nether-gate, to testify his gratitude for a signal deliverance from the perils of the sea. Be this as it may, the town was of sufficient consequence during the gross usurpation of Edward I, to be made the station of an English garrison; and in the course of the fierce struggle for the Scottish crown between that prince (nominally on behalf of Baliol) and Robert Bruce, Dundee was taken and retaken twice; in these operations the patriot Wallace took a conspicuous part; here impelled to retaliate the atrocities of Edward's officers, he put to death the son of the English governor. The castle of Dundee becoming so formidable an annoyance when in possession of an enemy, an occurrence but too frequent, Bruce deemed it expedient to demolish it, and not a vestige of it now remains; its site was that of the present Castle-street. The town was destroyed in the reign of Richard II. of England, and it suffered a similar infliction when Edward VI. sat upon the English throne; but on each occasion it arose from its ashes, and resumed its rank among the principal Scottish towns—several times being pledged as a security for ransoms, and for the fulfilment of treaties. The oldest charter Dundee can boast of is one granted by Robert Bruce, recognising the burghal privileges conferred by William the Lion, brother to the Earl of Huntington mentioned above. In this place the reformed religion found some of its earliest and warmest defenders; so zealous was the town in its cause, as to be honoured with the appellation of 'the second Geneva:' in 1544 the prophetic victim of Cardinal Beaton's ferocity, George Wishart, preached here; and in 1559 the provost, attended by a multitude of his townsmen, hastened to Edinburgh to assist in the siege of Leith, then in the possession of the French. In April, 1645, the notorious Duke of Montrose took Dundee by assault; it is affirmed that, during the pillage and slaughter which ensued, Montrose ascended to the top of the 'Law,' in order that his revenge might be satiated by witnessing the carnage that was being perpetrated below. The last calamity that befel this town was its capture and plunder by General Monk, soon after the battle of Worcester had placed Scotland within the gripe of the victorious Cromwell; but, as this dismal catastrophe is noticed hereafter, we shall close this brief narrative with the enumeration of a few eminent names that have conferred honour on Dundee, from its being the place either of their birth or education:—Sir William Wallace, the uncompromising patriot and heroic soldier; John Blair; Goldman and Ferguson, the poets; Sir George Mackenzie, the scholar and lawyer; and, in more recent days, Drs. Small, Williston, Davidson and Smith, each distinguished for literary talent and profound learning—and the naval victor, Admiral Duncan. It may not be out of place to mention the name of one who lived and died here, in the midst of usefulness—a Soldier of the Cross—on the pathway at the north-west corner of St. Peter's burying ground may be seen the tomb of that burning and shining light, the Rev. Robert Murray M'Cheyne, late minister of St. Peter's Church, Dundee.

COMMERCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The stranger, approaching Dundee by the Newport ferry, is soon made aware of its commercial character by its fine harbour and its extensive docks, crowded with shipping, and its noble quay; on the other hand, the volumes of smoke, issuing from a forest of towering chimnies, render it equally apparent that Dundee is likewise a great manufacturing town. The rapid increase, both of its productions and shipping, is indeed amazing. When the memorable sacking of Dundee was perpetrated by Monk, in 1651, sixty vessels were found in the harbour, so richly laden as to afford a booty to the captors exceeding in value the whole of their spoil 'in the wars throughout the three nations;' but this ill-gotten plunder was no sooner obtained than lost, for the ships sunk in passing the bar; so that, although those inhabitants who deposited their valuables on board were ruined, their plunderers were not enriched. The subsequent massacre of the brave defenders of the town, and the decapitation of its governor, Lumsden, are well known historical facts. This heavy blow crushed its rising commerce, and for several years few vessels floated in the deserted harbour: however, in 1669, thirty-seven vessels arrived in this port; in 1673, forty-nine; in 1680, eighty-five; but in 1731 the number had considerably decreased, and the trade continued to dwindle till this once flourishing port was resorted to chiefly by fishermen and smugglers, as before mentioned. But the happy situation of Dundee, the commodiousness of its harbour, and the enterprise of its inhabitants, formed a too felicitous combination of circumstances to allow the extinction of her trade to be perpetual: the tide of commerce turned, and once more set into the forsaken haven; and the following official statement will exhibit the commercial eminence to which progressive prosperity has enabled this port to attain.—In 1745 the port dues scarcely amounted to £1,200; but in 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, measuring 8,550 tons; and about the same period the foreign clearances outwards and inwards, were nearly 12,000 tons; and the coasting trade about 61,000. This augmentation of its shipping gave an impulse to improvement: new sea walls and quays were built, the tide harbour was extended, wet docks and a graving dock were constructed, and such mighty undertakings were effected that there are only two or three ports in Great Britain which now afford greater facilities and accommodation for shipping. In 1858 the number of foreign vessels which entered inward amounted to 418, with a registered tonnage of 79,465, and the number of the same class which cleared outwards amounted to 340, whose aggregate register amounted to 60,216 tons. The number of vessels in the coasting trade in the same year which entered inwards amounted to 1,751, whose aggregate register amounted to 162,930 tons, and the number of the same class which cleared outwards amounted to 468, whose aggregate tonnage amounted to 59,433 tons. In 1815 the management of the harbour was placed in the hands of commissioners, appointed annually under an act of parliament; but by a new act, passed in June 1830, the management was transferred to trustees to be elected annually; the provost, baillies and dean of guild to be perpetual trustees, in virtue of their office:—

The total expenditure for constructing and maintaining the harbour from July, 1815, to May 31, 1858, inclusive of interest on debt and sinking fund, was £983,292 13s. 5½d.; the total receipts during the same period in ordinary and extraordinary revenue, amounted to £662,288 3s. 10½d, exclusive of other amounts, accruing from sinking fund, interest, &c. The state of debt by the Dundee Harbour on the 31st of May, 1858, amounted to £171,907 15s. 10d.

The progressive increase of revenue will appear from the following statement:—

The number of the vessels belonging to the port in 1858 was 280, of the aggregate register of 52,300 tons. The whale fishery employs several ships, from this port, though it is not carried on to the extent it was formerly; but steam navigation is successfully conducted by the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company, whose vessels ply to London and Hull weekly, and to Hamburg and Cronstadt fortnightly and monthly. These steam ships have obtained a high character for swiftness and excellent accommodation: there is also steam communication during the summer months on the Tay from Dundee to Newburgh and Perth daily, The earliest articles manufactured in the town seem to have been soap and glass, which engaged a great number of hands; and the brewing of ale was carried on to some extent. The business of building ships appear likewise to have flourished here at an early period, and such an occupation soon led to the manufacture of cordage, which remains still a branch of commerce. The manufacture of cotton was once tried here, and had the appearance of forming an important branch in the trade of Dundee, having, at one time, seven companies engaged in it; but at length it declined, and finally died away, in favour of Glasgow. The manufacture of woollen cloths was next attempted to be established, but met with no success. Out of these failures arose a spirit for manufacturing goods from flax; and, as an encouragement to this branch, in its infancy, a bounty was given by government, on all linen exported, and a heavy duty laid on the importation of foreign linens. By these enactments the trade of Dundee increased to a great extent, and has kept pace with that of its shipping. The following shows the amount of Forty years ago, there were only four steam spinning mills; there are now upwards of forty. The various productions from flax, hemp and jute form the staple of the town: the raw material is imported chiefly from Russia, Prussia and Holland; this is spun by steam power into thread, which, after being bleached, is woven into Osnaburghs, sheetings, baggings, sailcloth, sacking, dowlas, &c. During the year 1850, the trade of Dundee became animated by augmenting briskness showing that free trade had increased the prosperity of this important port; the apparent declension during the year 1849 was owing to a considerable portion of the coasting trade being transferred to the railways—this was conspicuous in the transport of salmon, to the extent of three thousand boxes. The manufacture of machinery, steam engines, boilers, and millwright work is in a flourishing condition and carried on extensively by several eminent firms, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. Carmichael & Co. Ward Foundry; Kerr & Co., Douglas Foundry; Gourlay, Brothers & Co., Dundee Foundry; Pearce & Neish, Lilybank Foundry, and Robertson & Orchar, Wallace Foundry. Ship building is also an important feature in the general prosperity and industry of the town, and gives employment to a large number of artizans; several iron steamers have also been built by the Messrs Gourlay, Brothers & Co., at their works on the Marine Parade, and there are several extensive saw mills and timber yards, the principal of which belong to Messrs W. Kirkland & Sons, and Mr. George Jessman

DESCRIPTIVE SKETCH OF DUNDEE.—Although Dundee is not conspicuous for beauty, and has not enlarged its dimensions in proportion to its increased population, it contains several handsome streets. The town is illuminated with gas, furnished by two companies, and is now abundantly supplied with good water, under the direction of an efficient company, formed a few years ago. The greater part of the mansions of the opulent are ranged on the lofty bank of the Tay, westward of the town. This situation commands a view of the majestic river, and the beautiful scenery on the opposite coast. The delightful lawn, which forms the margin of the northern bank of the river, called 'Magdalen Green,' is much frequented as a promenade, and in summer it is appropriated to cricket and other athletic sports. The central point of the river is a wide oblong area, called High-street, on the south side of which stands the town-house, comprising the guild-hall, the court-room, and appropriate offices, together with repositories for the town records. The town-house was finished in 1734, from a plan of the elder Adams. The front is very handsome, beneath which is a piazza; and from the centre of the building rises a a lofty spire, 140 feet high. The trades' hall ornaments the eastern end of High-street; besides the apartments in which the nine incorporated trades hold their meetings, there is a large public reading-room within its arrangements. Castle-street (the site of the ancient castle), which runs from High-street towards the quay, contains a Congregational chapel and the theatre. Reform-street diverges from High-street in a northern direction, and is composed of very handsome houses and shops. The New Corn Exchange and public hall, in Bank-street (for which the inhabitants of Dundee are mainly indebted to Lord Kinnaird) is an excellent addition to the public buildings of this town. The building is from a design by Mr. Charles Edward, architect, Dundee, and is highly suitable for the double purpose to which it is intended to be applied—a corn-exchange and public hall. It is in the anglo-Italian style of architecture, and its exterior is plain, but bold and massive in detail. The principal entrance is from Bank-street. Above the entrance lobbies, and projecting into the hall, is a gallery capable of accommodating about 200 people, seated comfortably. On the right and left of the entrances are small retiring rooms, used as committee-rooms. The gallery is entered by projecting passages in the inside of the hall, from plats on the stair, which also lead to retiring rooms on a level with the gallery—one on the east and another on the west side. The hall itself is a spacious apartment, 130 by 60 feet and 42 feet 6 inches high, and capable of accommodating about 2,500 people, seated comfortably, so that in an emergency about 3,000 people might be accommodated within its walls. The platform runs from east to west along the south end of the hall, and access to it is had from the committee-rooms in the front or north end of the building, by an under corridor running along the whole length of the hall and a narrow staircase at the east side of the platform. The side walls are 27 feet high and 3 feet thick at the pilasters, and recessed between the roof girders, which gives a pleasing effect in the interior by breaking up the line of wall. The roof is supported by ten malleable iron girders, T shaped, and springing off stone corbels, placed 12 feet high, and projecting into the wall. The girders are semi-circle on the inside, with circular spandrils fitting into the sloping sides of the roof. The iron is cased with wood, with plaster mouldings round the spandril openings, which, with the other panelling and ornaments, have a beautiful effect. The hall is beautifully lighted entirely from the roof. During the day the light is ample, and the arrangement for lighting the hall with gas has a brilliant and pleasing effect—the gas light proceeding from clusters of jet burners in enamelled cones in the roof. The ventilation by the aid of these lights, and by admitting the fresh air from small openings on the side walls, is considered to be most efficient. For the purpose of a corn-exchange the hall is in every way suitable. It is fitted up with a series of stalls for the corn merchants—seven on each side—which are so constructed that they fold in close to the wall, so as not in any way to interfere with the hall for public meetings or entertainments. The seats required when the hall is used for public meetings can be removed beneath, in a very short time, so as to adopt it to its main purpose of a corn exchange. The decorations are completed in a manner highly creditable to Mr. Crace, of London, to whom it was entrusted, and to his able manager, Mr. Alison, under whose superintendence the whole has been carried out in a style which has given full effect to the elegant design of Mr. Edward, architect of the building. The following brief description will give some idea of the nature and extent of the decorations. The girders, which are the main features of the hall, are painted in bronze, and have a beautiful effect. Over the orchestra or platform, in the centre of the cove at the south end of the hall, are placed the royal arms, in which the Scotch character of the arms are strictly adhered to. The panels surrounding the same are painted grey, filled in with arabesque ornament, containing emblems of music and of commerce. The styles are dark vellum, relieved with drab ornament. The recessed space between the cove is inlaid with ornament in green and maroon, with the motto, 'The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof,' painted in vellum colour on a maroon ground. At the lower ends of the outer circle are the arms of Lords Kinnaird and Panmure, and on the north side, similarly situated, are those of the Marquis of Breadalbane and the Earl of Southest—all having their proper supporters and emblazoned shields in true heraldic character. The oblong panels above are filled in with arabesque ornament. The intermediate circles are filled in with musical devices on a maroon ground. The styles are painted dark vellum, relieved with inlaid ornamental wreaths in dark drab. On the top of the circle south end is the rose, thistle, and shamrock, and on the north end the Scotch thistle, all in high relief, and are painted in their natural colours, surrounded with emblems of 'Plenty,' in bas relief and bronzed. The side walls are green, with dark vellum pilasters, relieved with inlaid ornaments in green and maroon. The frieze is panelled with maroon ground, on which are the following mottoes—'Live and let live,' &c., &c. The borders round these panels are relieved with maroon ornaments, inlaid. The egg in the cornice being painted blue, harmonizes beautifully with the other parts. The lower recesses are painted in grey colour. The three centre spaces on the west side contain the arms of Lady Montague, Viscount Duncan, and the Earl of Strathmore; and in the centre spaces, on the east side, are those of the Earl of Airlie, Lord Grey, and Lord Wharncliffe, which have the proper supporters and shields emblazoned. The other spaces are filled in with bronze brackets for busts of eminent men; those of Washington, Earl Grey, and Wellington are already set up. These brackets are all bronzed, and fitted up in such a way as to conceal the ventilation apparatus, and once filled with busts, will be a good feature in the room. Under the corbels of the roof girders are shields with the arms of noblemen and gentlemen who have given donations to the hall, all emblazoned in true heraldic style. The panels in the roof are painted in grey colours, relieved by ornaments in green and maroon. The styles are painted drab, relieved with centre ornaments in green. The plaster ornaments, which show beautiful relief, are all painted in vellum colours. The lower part of the hall, which is lined with wood, is stained dark, and gives a base to the whole. The front of the gallery is painted in oak, and relieved with bronze mouldings, with a clock in the centre, supplied by Mr. Rattrey, Nethergate, and surrounded with a festoon in bronze. The modelling of the arms and the other plaster ornaments are well executed, and reflect great credit to Mr. Miller, the modeller. Looking up Castle-street, the elegant edifice called the 'Seminaries,' with its chaste Doric portico, forms a graceful terminating object. This tasteful structure was completed in 1834, at a cost of £10,000. It comprehends the burgh grammar school, and an academy, patronised by the corporation, designed to impart a liberal education to the pupils, including instructions in literature, science, and the ancient and modern languages. In addition to the above, there are numerous public schools, and many private educational establishments.

The principal church of Dundee rears its huge and lofty tower westward of High-street. The church of which this tower is the remnant was destroyed by fire some years ago, but was rebuilt; and its dimensions are so capacious as to comprehend four distinct parochial churches within its walls. At the foot of the church tower, on its western side, is placed the ancient market cross, removed from High-street. It is a carved pillar, supporting an unicorn, which holds an armorial shield between its knees. The places of worship in Dundee, of all denominations, number 58—for particulars of these see the end of the 'Directory' of this town—several are highly ornamental structures. Adjoining the fine church of St. Andrew is a meeting-house for the 'Glassites'—a section of the religious world founded by Mr. John Glass, who, it appears, was made a freeman of Dundee by the town council in 1753. Besides the burial-grounds attached to several of the religious edifices, there are three extensive cemeteries, the inspection of which cannot fail to interest a stranger. The most recent, which is situated to the west of the Perth road, has a beautiful site, and is gracefully planted with shrubs and flowers. On passing through the arch over which the railway inclined plane of the Dundee and Newtyle line is carried, you arrive at the entrance of Dudhope Castle, now converted into a barrack, but originally the seat of the Scrymgeour family, standard-bearers to the Scottish kings, one of whom, after the Restoration, was elevated to the peerage, by the title of Earl of Dundee. This mansion subsequently became the property of the reckless persecutor of the Presbyterians, Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount of Dundee. From the approach to this ancient mansion is a fine view of the new gaol, the plan of which admits of the classification of offenders. Adjoining the barrack is the public bleaching green.

The new Royal Infirmary, erected in 1853, near to the military barracks, Dudhope, furnishes an attractive evidence of the benevolent efforts of the wealthy for the amelioration of human suffering and misery. The total cost incurred in this very beautiful and merciful institution amounted to nearly £15,000, which was acquired from the following sources:—Bequest from the late James Souter, Esq., of Thornbank, £7,570; payments out of the reserve funds, £3,276; sale of the old infirmary, £2,972; donations and other sources, £581. At the east end of Cowgate is the only fragment remaining of the ancient town wall. It is an arch which bestrides the street, and is, perhaps, indebted for its continuance to a feeling of grateful veneration for the memory of the amiable martyr, Geo. Wishart, who, from this gate, during the plague of 1544, preached to the infected, assembled on the outer side, and to the healthy on the inner; his text was Psalm 107, verse 20, 'The Lord sent his word and healed them.' The Royal Lunatic Asylum, in the Forfar road, both for elegance and accommodation, will not suffer from a comparison with any kindred establishment in Scotland. The Royal Orphan Institution, founded in 1815, is an admirable charity; and so are many others which are enumerated in the list of 'Public Buildings.' In close proximity to the asylum, a beautiful and commodious building has been erected for the poor, capable of holding about 300 inmates. It was opened for their reception in November, 1856, and cost about £10,000. At the western termination of the fine terrace, called Dock-street, overlooking the docks and harbour, is an elegant building, in the Grecian style, named the 'Exchange Coffee-rooms.' It was erected at an expense of £9,000, and contains spacious coffee and reading-rooms, besides apartments for the transaction of mercantile business. Access to these rooms is liberally permitted to every respectable stranger. Contiguous to this is a gorgeous arch, or rather a structure surmounting three arches; a capacious central one, and two of smaller dimensions at the sides. The style is Norman, and each front is richly sculptured with countless intersections of circular arches; two octagonal turrets rise from the summit. This costly monument was raised to commemorate the landing near this spot of Queen Victoria. Near this arch is the fish market, amply supplied with the various species of the finny tribes in season; the Dundee haddock is a peculiar favourite. From this locality, Union-street forms a communication with the Nethergate; it contains excellent shops, and the 'Thistle Hall', much used for public meetings. The various banking establishments occupy buildings which likewise contribute to the embellishment of the town, as well as to the facilities of its trade. At the top of Reform-street, and corner of Ward road, is the new Post Office—a handsome and convenient building, in the Italian style of architecture. Nearly £5,000 was expended in erecting this useful establishment, which is well laid out, and is an elegant and commodious building. It is in immediate contiguity to the Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce; and its admirable situation gives it the additional advantages of nearness of access to the members of those institutions, besides placing it in a healthful locality where it may be seen to advantage. The Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, Panmure-street, was erected in 1852, at a cost of about £10,000. It is a handsome building, in the Flemish-Gothic style of the fourteenth century. Nine newspapers issue weekly from the press of Dundee, and maintain an increasing circulation. The 'Dundee, Perth and Cupar Advertiser,' published on Tuesday and Friday; the 'Dundee Courier' on Wednesday; the 'Northern Warder' on Thursday; and the 'Saturday Post' on Saturday. (For days of publication of the remaining journals see 'Directory.'

The MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT of Dundee is exercised by a provost, four baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, an hospital master, a kirk master, and twelve councillors. There are six courts held within the town—the burgh or baillie court, the sheriff's court, the commissary court, the guild court, the police court, and the justice of peace small debt court. The town is divided into three districts, and subdivided into eleven wards, for the convenience of the registration of the burgh electors. Dundee sends one representative to parliament. Sir John Ogilvie, Bart., of Baldoran House, is the present member.

The principal market days are Tuesday and Friday; and there is a cattle and sheep market held every Monday. Fairs—Stobb's fair, for cattle, sheep, and horses, on the 11th July, on the first Tuesday following (O.S.); Dundee first fair, for cattle, sheep, and horses, on the 26th August—if that day falls on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday, if not the first Tuesday after the 26th of August (N.S.); and the second Dundee fair on the 19th September (the same rule observed as that regulating the first fair.) Feeing markets for servants are held on the 25th of May, and on the 22nd November, or on the first Friday thereafter.

The number of inhabitants by the census return of 1851 was found to be 78,931. The proximate number now (1860) is probably 86 or 87,000.

INVERGOWRIE is a village singularly situated, being partly in Perthshire and partly in Forfarshire, one portion being in the parish of Lonforgan, the other in that of Liff. It is three miles from Dundee. There is a very neat Free church, to which is attached a school. A fragment of an ancient church forms an interesting object, as a graveyard surrounds it, in which are deposited the remains of several highly respectable persons; among others the Very Rev. Heneage Horsley, M.A., dean of Brechin, and prependary of St. Asaph, son of the renowned Dr. Horsley, bishop of St. Asaph. He died in 1847.

BULLIONFIELD, contiguous to the above, is in the parish of Liff, and contains the only paper mill in the county. Milnfield extensive stone quarry is in the vicinity, and gives employment to a great number of hands. Adjoining it is the Invergowrie railway station, upon the Dundee and Perth line.

DUNNICHEN WITH LETHAM.

DUNNICHEN parish extends four miles in length, having Forfar on the north-west, Inverarity on the south-west, Rescobie on the north, and Kirkden on the east. The land, which is nearly all arable, is productive, and has been much improved by the use of marl, artificial manures, and draining. The principal village is LETHAM, situated on the north-east portion of the parish, five miles from Forfar,: it is a modern little place, having been erected some years ago on the estate of Mr. Dempster; and thrives by the manufacture of considerable quantities of linen cloth, a branch which gives employment to a large proportion of the inhabitants. Fairs are held on the 26th May (unless that day should fall on a Saturday, when it is held on Monday) and November the 23rd.

POST OFFICE, LETHAM, George Strachan, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from FORFAR), at one in the afternoon, and are despatched at forty-five minutes past seven in the morning.

FORFAR.

IS a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the county town, and the capital of the parish of its name; 57 miles N. from Edinburgh, 15 W. from Arbroath, 14 N. from Dundee, 13 S. W. from Brechin, and 5 E. by N. from Glammis; situate in the lowest part of a country sloping towards it on all sides; and on the North Eastern Railway, for which line there is a station adjacent to the town. Forfar is now of pleasant appearance, though strict regularity has by no means been observed in the formation of the streets, which contain many well-built houses and handsome shops. Some years since were erected in Castle-street, at the general expense of the shire, a handsome suite of county buildings. The town-house, which was rebuilt previously, besides the requisite offices, contains a spacious upper room for public meetings and amusements. The inhabitants support an excellently conducted newsroom and library, the latter comprising upwards of three thousand volumes. The original charters which constituted Forfar a royal burgh are lost, but the privileges were confirmed in 1669, in virtue of which the burgh is governed by a provost, three baillies, and fifteen councillors, a third of whom are elected annually. A sheriff's court is held for the trial of civil and criminal cases generally: and a police court for the determination of local, civil, and police affairs—the latter department confided to constables The burgh unites with Montrose, Brechin, Bervie and Arbroath in sending one member to parliament. The revenue of the burgh, arising from lands, customs, &c. may be averaged at about £2,000 per annum. The chief trade of this town, and of its vicinity, is the weaving of osnaburgs and other coarse linens. There are several breweries, and these, with the tanning and currying of leather, comprise the other principal establishments of business. There are several respectable inns, and five general banking establishments—they are branches respectively of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Dundee Banking Company,' the 'Royal Bank of Scotland,' the 'National Bank of Scotland,' and the Union Bank of Scotland.' There is likewise a Savings' Bank in the town.

The places of worship are two churches under the establishment, two Free, an Episcopal, and an United Presbyterian. There are several public and private schools of repute, for pupils of either sex: the Forfar Academy, an excellent institution, commenced its instructive course in 1815—this comprises the usual routine of a liberal English education, and includes among other accomplishments, perfection in the classics, mathematics, the languages, music, &c. Three burgh schools, for the benefit of the poorer classes, have been built at the different ends of the town; they are very commodious, and ably conducted by their respective masters. In 1850 a public cemetery was formed; it occupies six Scotch acres on the south side of the town, and is laid out in tasteful walks, with ornamental shrubs, &c. forming a pleasant promenade. On a mound at the top of the cemetery, which occupies one of those gently sloping hills for which this part of the country is so noted, a fine monument was erected in 1852 by public subscription to the memory of Sir Robert Peel. The figure stands upon the centre of a large pedestal, covered by a dome, which is supported on eight pillars. From its site the town and surrounding district may be seen to great advantage, while the monument is seen on its elevated position at a considerable distance. On the west side of the town is a fine loch, nearly a mile in length by half a mile in breadth; it is a beautiful sheet of water, abounding with fish. Upon a small artificial island, near the north end of the loch, anciently stood a nunnery, founded by Queen Margaret, as a separate establishment from her husband Malcolm. At the partial drainage of the lake, about seventy years since, for the purpose of obtaining its fertilizing marl, some weapons and instruments were found at the bottom: these were conjectured to have been the implements used by the murderers of Malcolm II. at Glammis, on the ground of a tradition which asserts that the assassins, in attempting to cross the lake upon the ice, went down and perished. The date of the erection of Forfar castle, which stood upon an eminence to the north of the town, cannot be certified, but it is said to have been the place of meeting of the first parliament convened by King Malcolm Canmore, and his occasional seat of residence after the recovery of his throne from Macbeth. The magistrates of the burgh some years since removed the market cross from the street to the site of the old castle, to mark the spot where the monarch sojourned, as but few remains of the edifice are now extant. A castle tower is here erected as an observatory, whence is obtained the best view of the town and surrounding neighbourhood. The 'Picture of Scotland,' and the 'Gazetteer' as well, furnish many interesting accounts of Forfar, and some amusing traditionary anecdotes connected with the town, which we are compelled to exclude from our pages. The Rev. John Bruce, the intelligent author of the 'Statistical Account of the Parish of Forfar,' furnishes a number of particulars illustrative of the rise of the town, its tastes and appearances. He says that about the middle of the last century there were not above seven tea-kettles, seven pair of bellows, and as many watches in Forfar; now (in 1793), he adds, every house in the town has a tea-kettle and bellows, and every menial servant must have his watch. At the same not distant period an ox, valued at forty shillings, supplied the flesh market of Forfar for a fortnight. The steady advancement of population, trade, and agricultural improvements, both before and since 1793, when this gentleman wrote, have in this district, as elsewhere, revolutionized the prices and consumption of articles, and now Forfar is one of the most thriving and comfortable towns in the county. The market is held on Saturday; and cattle markets are held every Wednesday from April to November. A fair is held on North moor for horses and cattle on the second Wednesday in each month from April to November. Fairs are also held on the first Tuesdays in July and August.

FRIOCKHEIM, ARBIRLOT, CARMYLIE, GUTHRIE,

INVERKEILOR, KINNEL, KIRKDEN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

FRIOCKHEIM is a modern village in the parish of Kirkden, six miles from Arbroath, situate on the right bank of the Lunan, and near the line of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway. It owes its origin to Mr. Andson, who laid out the ground on a regular plan, and feued it into small lots, in order to encourage the settlement of weavers, &c.; and by far the greater proportion of the inhabitants are employed in the spinning of flax and weaving of linen cloth, and also at the neighbouring quarries. Altogether the situation of this place is peculiarly eligible for the seat of manufactures, being nearly equi-distant from most of the towns in the county, and in the immediate vicinity of a railway. In 1835 upwards of £700 was collected by public subscription, and the proceeds applied to the erection of a handsome chapel, in connection with the Established church. There are several good schools in the village and its vicinity, in which are taught the ordinary branches of education. It also contains a Free church and an Independent chapel. There is no municipal government, the hitherto exemplary conduct and contented habits of the inhabitants rendering such description of superintendence unnecessary, but there is a resident police officer.

ARBIRLOT parish is contiguous to that of St. Vigean's at Arbroath, on the north, and bounded on the south-east by the German ocean, extending four miles in length by three in breadth. The village stands on the east bank of the Elliot stream, from whence the name is derived, which was formerly Aber-eltiot. Along the sea coast the land is sandy; inland the soil is a rich loam, capable of producing various crops. About a quarter of a mile south-east of the village stands the remains of Kelley castle, an ancient rain supposed originally to belong to the family of Auchterlony, one of the ancestors of whom burned the Abbey of Arbroath. Arbirlot contains a parish library, a savings' bank, and a parochial, and Free church school. It also contains a Free church and manse, which were erected about six years ago, and cost about £1,300.

CARMYLIE is six miles in length by three in breadth. The parish is hilly, and contains much land that is unproductive; but there are considerable quarries, from which good pavement stones are obtained, and exported in great quantities. The small river Elliot runs through the whole length of the parish.

GUTHRIE parish is divided into two parts, lying nearly six miles asunder from each other. The land slopes from the hill of Guthrie to the south and south-east, a part only being arable. Prior to the reformation this parish had a collegiate church, with a provost and three prebendaries. The patronage of the parish belongs to the family of Guthrie, one of whom was slain at the battle of Flodden. There is a parochial school in the parish.

The parish of INVERKEILOR presents a front of five miles to the sea at Lunan bay, near which, on an eminence, at the mouth of the Lunan river, stands an old venerable ruin, named 'Red Castle,' which is said to have been built by William the Lion, and used by him as a hunting seat. The parish church stands inland, on the Lunan water, at the distance of seven miles from Arbroath, and six from Montrose. The Keilor rivulet runs through the parish to the sea; and the small fishing village of ETHIEHAVEN is situated at the mouth of that river. It contains a Established church and a Free church, which was erected in the year 1843. It likewise contains several schools, in which are taught the ordinary branches of education. There are some other hamlets in the parish, and several fine seats, particularly 'Ethie House,' the seat of the Earl of Northesk; about a mile from which eastward, near the sea, stand the remains of St. Murdoch's chapel, at one time a cell of Aberbrothock; and a short way to the south is the promontory of Redhead.

KINNEL parish lies on the north side of the Lunan, upon which stream are several flax spinning mills; and the church stands on the bank of the river, at the distance of six miles from Arbroath. The parish extends about four miles in length, by three in breadth, and is separated from the sea by Lunan parish. The surface of this district is mostly flat, and in a good state of cultivation; and there are some plantations in a thriving condition. Within the parish are several tumuli; and tradition points out the spot where a battle was fought between the rival clans of Lindsay and Ogilvie, in the year 1443.

The parish of KIRKDEN is between six and seven miles long and two broad, and is watered by the Lunan (on which are some mills, one of them a large spinning mill), and one of its tributaries, the Vinny. A small patch of Dunnichen parish lies in the western division of Kirkden, which latter is tolerably fertile, and the lands well enclosed and planted. In this district are some remains of antiquity, including an obelisk, bearing some rude characters, the meaning of which cannot now be deciphered.

GLAMMIS AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GLAMMIS is a rich and fertile parish—the village, a small one, is 13 miles N. from Dundee, 12 N.E. from Coupar Angus, 5 S.W. from Forfar, and the same distance S. from Kirriemuir; situated in the vale of Strathmore, which is watered by the river Dean, and is one of the best enclosed, drained, and farmed districts in Scotland. The principal object of interest in this neighbourhood is Glammis Castle, which stands in a park near the village. This is an edifice of princely and antique appearance, consisting of an irregular congregation of tall towers, some of which are of remoter date than others. It was anciently a royal residence, and the scene of the death of Malcolm II., in 1034; it afterwards became the property of Macbeth, after whose death it fell to the crown. Robert II. gave it to John Lyon, his favourite, who on marrying the king's second daughter became the founder of the present noble family of Strathmore; and the eldest son of the earl bears the title of Lord Glammis. On the conviction and execution of the young and beautiful Lady Glammis for witchcraft, 1537, the castle once more became royal property, and was a residence of James V., but it was afterwards restored to the family. It contains a valuable collection of pictures. Near the castle stands a remarkable curiosity, namely, a great number of dials, thus disposed—on a pedestal stand the figures of four lions rampant, life size, each holding a dial in their fore paws, facing the four cardinal points. From their heads rises a huge mass of stone, something like a pine-apple in shape, with the protuberances upon it formed into dials, making the number of these ancient time-pieces eighty-four. The castle, with its historic associations; the pedestal, and Malcolm's gravestone—a huge stone of rude design, standing in the garden of the Manse—form the chief attraction to tourists in the county of Farfar. The inhabitants of Glammis are principally employed in the weaving of linen fabrics. Two societies are established here, viz., the Gardeners' and the Freemasons', who hold their meetings in a neat building erected for the purpose, and which is also used for lectures and other purposes. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in May and the first Wednesday after the 22nd of November (both new style); also on the Wednesday after Whit-Sunday (old style): and two others more recently established held respectively in April and July.

POST OFFICE, GLAMMIS, John Langlands, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at thirty minutes past eight and ten minutes past ten every morning, and at thirty minutes past five in the afternoon; and are despatched to all parts at ten minutes before twelve in the morning, and at twenty minutes past one in the afternoon.

The Money Order Office is open daily from ten in the morning till six in the evening.

POST OFFICE, DOUGLAS TOWN and KINNETTLES, David Kidd, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive every morning at fifteen minutes before eight; and are despatched, on week days, at thirty minutes past twelve to all parts; on Sundays, at eleven in the morning.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY ON THE SCOTTISH NORTH EASTERN LINE.

Station about a mile and a half from the village of Glammis—William Blythe, station master

KIRRIEMUIR AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KIRRIEMUIR is a large town, one of considerable antiquity, a burgh of barony, and capital of its parish, 62 miles N. from Edinburgh, 18 N. from Dundee 6 N. W. from Forfar. and 5 N. from Glammis, situated near the foot of the braes of Angus, on the south-west side of a hill, along the northern brow of a beautiful glen, through which flows the small rivulet Gairie. The prospect from the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the delightful vale of Strathmore is brought into view, displaying one of the grandest panoramic scenes it is possible to conceive. The town consists of several streets, diverging from each other—fancifully described as resembling the shaft and arms of an anchor; its appearance has been much improved of late years. A branch line of railway from the Scottish North Eastern unites it with other cities and towns. For a long period Kirriemuir has been the thriving seat of considerable manufactures, comprising about twenty varieties of linen: it is celebrated for the excellent fabric of its cloth, and the ingenuity and industry of those employed in producing it; some idea may be formed of the importance of this trade from the fact that the looms of Kirriemuir have furnished, in one year, upwards of one hundred thousand pieces, varying in length from one hundred to one hundred and seventy yards, giving employment to more than two thousand weavers.

The date of the barony of Kirriemuir is at the present day unknown, and it is only certain that the jurisdiction of its baillie once extended over a large tract of country; Lord Douglas, who is superior of the burgh, appoints the baillie. A body of constables is appointed annually; there is a superintendent of police. and a sheriff's court is held six times a year, for the recovery of small debts.

The places of worship with their ministers are given at a subsequent page—they comprise edifices for the established church, the Free church, United Presbyterians, Original Seceders, and Episcopalians. There are four banking establishments, branches respectively of the British Linen Co., the city of Glasgow and National Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland. There are also several respectable hotels, including a temperance hotel in connection with which is a reading room well supplied with daily and other papers. The inhabitants of this respectable little town are not more notable for their ingenious and persevering industry, than for their general intelligence and benevolence. There are libraries belonging to the different religious denominations, and many private and public schools of a superior kind. In the infant's schools several hundred children receive their early instruction, and fit them for the due observance of the sabbath. Three miles to the north-east, within the boundary of the parish, over the small river Carity, stands the castle of Invercarity, a large Gothic edifice. in a state of good preservation; and two miles west are the ruins of Castle Balfour, erected by Cardinal Beaton. The surface of the parish, which extends some twenty miles by six, is much diversified; to the east and west of the town it is almost level: but the greater proportion of the district is beautifully varied with hills and dales, rivers, woods, and arable fields—some parts embellished with thriving plantations: and it is intersected by roads in all directions. The weekly market is held on Friday; and the fairs on the first Friday after Good Friday, the second Wednesday after the 26th of May, the 24th of July or the Wednesday after: 19th of October or the Wednesday after, the second Tuesday after Martinmas, and on the first Friday after the 22nd of November.

POST OFFICE, John Stivens, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty-five minutes past seven, and at thirty minutes past eleven every morning, and are despatched (to FORFAR) for all parts at forty-five minutes past eight in the morning, and at thirty-five minutes past three in the afternoon. Letters are also despatched to CORTACHY and AIRLY every morning at eight, and to LINTRATHEN at twelve, noon. To GLENPROSEN, Tuesdays and Saturdays at eight in the morning, and on Tuesdays and Fridays to CLOVA at eight in the morning.

The Money Order Office is open on week days from nine in the morning until six in the evening. On Saturdays it is open until eight in the evening.

POST OFFICE, PERTHHEAD or NEWTOWN, Robert Morrison, Post Master.—Letters arrive at forty five minutes past one in the afternoon, and are despatched at fifty minutes past one in the afternoon.

MONTROSE

AND NEIGHBOURHOOD, WITH THE PARISHES OF CRAIG, DUN, AND MARYTON.

MONTROSE is a royal burgh and sea-port, the capital of its parish, and a branch station of the Aberdeen railway, 72 miles N.N.E from Edinburgh, 29 N.E. from Dundee, 23 S.S.W. from Stonehaven, 21 E. by N. from Forfar, 13 S.S.W. from Inverbervie, 12 S. from Arbroath, and 8 E. from Brechin The German Ocean, the rivers North and South Esk, and a large expanse of water designated the 'basin of Montrose,' so nearly encompass the town as to constitute its site a peninsula. It was anciently called Celurea; but the derivation of its modern appellation, Montrose, has been controverted by etymologists. Camden derives the name from the Latin Mons Rosarum, the 'Mount of Roses,' which is countenanced by the seal of the town bearing the ornament of roses, with the motto Mare ditat, Rosa decorat—'the sea enriches, and the rose adorns' Montrose is connected with many important events in Scottish history; it is mentioned as the port from which Sir James Douglas embarked in 1330, with a numerous and splendid retinue, on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, carrying along with him the heart of Robert Bruce. It is distinguished as the first place in Scotland where the Greek language was taught, and as having sent forth from its seminary the celebrated scholar Andrew Melville; it was the birthplace of the warlike Marquis of Montrose, and the house in which he was born was occupied as an inn not many years ago. It is also celebrated as the birthplace of Joseph Hume, the distinguished statesman, who represented Montrose for a great number of years in the British Senate, and to whose memory a beautiful monument has been raised in High-street. Montrose bestows the title of duke upon the chief of the family of Graham. This was the first port made by the French fleet, in December, 1715, with the Chevalier on board; and that prince embarked at the same place in the month of February of the following year.

The High-street of Montrose is of great width, the houses are lofty, many of them having their gables towards the street, which gives to the town an ancient aspect; and not only are the main streets strikingly clean, but the secondary ones also are neat andg aslighted. About the centre of Main-street is the Town House, a neat plain building of two storeys, with an arcade below, beneath which the Post Office is situated. The South Esk is crossed by a magnificent suspension bridge, on the precise site of the former wooden one. The foundation-stone of the masonry was laid in September, 1828, and the bridge declared opened in 1829. It was designed by Captain Brown, R.N., patentee, and finished at an expense of upwards of £20,000. It stretches across the river in a noble span—the distance between the points of suspension being 432 feet, and, together with its approaches, the structure extends 800 feet. It forms a roadway of 26 feet in breadth, having a footpath railed off. This structure is a great ornament to the town, and Bridge-street forms a very handsome approach to it. The river at the bridge is very deep, having 35 feet of water at spring tides, and 20 feet at low water in ordinary tides; and so rapid that during ebb it frequently runs at the rate of six miles an hour. The harbour formed by the river and an arm of the sea—is very commodious, and a safe asylum for vessels in tempestuous weather. Two light-houses have been erected at a very great expense. They are a most valuable improvement, as they enable ships to enter the port in the darkest of nights. A larger house, in which the keeper of the lights resides, is provided with accommodation for the reception and recovery of persons who have suffered shipwreck; and attached to this praiseworthy establishment is a life-boat. The quays in the harbour are very judiciously planned—built in the most substantial manner, and there is a wet dock and a patent slip. The port has a custom-house belonging to it, which comprehends within its bounds the coast from the Red head on the south to Bervie-brow or the Podhead on the north. The shipping trade includes corn, timber, coal, and cured fish. The principal manufactures of Montrose comprise flax spinning, linen yarns, sheetings, and sail-cloth, which are carried on extensively; but there are various other branches of trading industry of considerable importance, among which may be enumerated rope and sailmaking, shipbuilding, iron-founding, tanning, and two starch manufactories. There are seven branch banks and a savings' bank—the latter with government security. Several commodious inns afford the necessary accommodation to visitors; the principal are the 'Star,' the 'Albion,' the 'White Horse,' and the 'Crown.' The Downs or Links are situated between the town and the sea, and are the most extensive of any in Scotland, comprehending a circuit of several miles, finely formed by nature for the favourite and healthful Scots' game of golf, and the popular game of cricket, both of which are here much practised. The railway passing through the Links has a little curtailed their dimensions. Montrose has its assembly-rooms and other places of amusement; and numerous institutions, charitable, educational, scientific and social. Two admirably conducted newspapers issue weekly from the Montrose press—the 'Review' (Liberal), and the 'Standard' (Conservative).

The erection of Montrose into a royal burgh has generally been referred to the year 1352, in the reign of David II.; but there is good reason for believing that the first charter emanated from David I. The municipal government is vested in the provost, the magistrates and town council. The town is protected by a body of police, under the superintendence of commissioners. A burgh or baillie court is held every Thursday in the court-room; a justice of peace court on the first Monday of every month, and a sheriff's court on the third Friday in the months of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last-mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. The burgh is united with those of Forfar, Brechin, Arbroath, and Inverbervie, in returning a representative to parliament.

The parish church is a large building, elegantly finished, measuring 98 feet long by 65 over walls. This church has two galleries, and is capable of holding 2,500 people, the steeple is lofty, surmounted by a towering spire, which can be seen at a considerable distance. There are two handsome Free churches and two Episcopalian chapels; and various other places of worship are in the town (for which see the end of the 'Directory' of this town.) The public charities of Montrose are very numerous; among these are the ancient Hospital of Montrose, under the guardianship of the town; the Royal Lunatic Asylum, incorporated by royal charter in 1810; an infirmary and dispensary, and Dorward's House of Refuge, all of which occupy capacious and ornamental structures. The Lunatic Asylum and Infirmary are now in one large building, built by the county of Forfar, and standing about a mile from the town. The academy, situated on the Links, is a handsome erection, surmounted by a neat dome; the establishment comprises a rector, and six or seven teachers in the various branches of mathematics, the Greek, Latin, and modern languages, writing and arithmetic, English grammar, drawing, &c. Many other educational establishments are supported; and the numerous societies, both religious and benevolent, maintained in the town, are highly creditable to the munificence of its residents. Several libraries and reading-rooms are supported, and an interesting museum is contained in a very tasteful building, in Panmure-place. The market is on Friday; and great hiring fairs are held on the Fridays next after Whit-Sunday and Martimas (old style.)

CRAIG parish occupies the peninsular corner of land between the sea and the basin of Montrose. The islet called INCH BRAYOCK, or ROSSIE ISLAND, in the neck of water connecting the basin with the sea, belongs to the parish; and there are also within its limits the two small fishing villages of USAN and FERRYDEN. The land is generally arable, and beneath the surface nature has deposited abundance of limestone.

The parish of DUN lies between Montrose and Brechin, on the North bank of the South Esk. The land is generally fertile, and the surface for the most part level. In the parish is a small lake, called Dun's Dish.

MARYTOUN (or Maryton) is a parish, lying on the south side of the South Esk, and the west side of the Basin of Montrose, bounded by Craig parish (before-mentioned) on the south. The land is arable and well cultivated, and the parish derives considerable advantage from its proximity to the town of Montrose.

NEWTYLE.

IN a parish and village—the latter situated on the road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire), 11 miles north-east from the former town, and somewhat above two north from the latter. It is a station on the Dundee and Newtyle railway. The neighbourhood is very pleasant and picturesque, and the village itself respectable. In the summer season it is a resort for visitors, especially from Dundee. It presents inducements to manufacturers from Dundee and other towns to establish works in this district, land being comparatively cheap and wages low; the locality of Newtyle is likewise considered most eligible as a depot for grain and other agricultural produce. The inhabitants of the village are almost exclusively occupied in weaving; the articles produced from the loom are chiefly coarse cloths used for packing. The places of worship are Established, Free, and United Presbyterian churches—one of each, and there are schools connected with the former. The parish, which lies in the south-west part of the county, extends two miles in length by one and three-quarters in breadth, including a portion of the Sidlaw hills, from which the lands decline into the rich flat exposure of Strathmore. Near the village are the remains of the castle of Hatton, built by Lawrence Lord Oliphant, in the year 1575; and contiguous to these ruins some vestiges are visible of the still more ancient castle of Balcraig.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN, lies in the south-eastern part of Scotland; bounded on the north by the Frith of Forth, on the east by that strait and also by the North Sea, on the south by Berwickshire, and on the west by Edinburghshire, or Mid Lothian: from east to west it extends twenty-five miles; from north to south, at the middle, sixteen—at the east end it is not more than ten miles across, and at the west end about twelve: its surface presents an area of about two hundred and seventy-two square miles, or 174,080 statute acres.

The EARLY HISTORY of this county is so intimately connected with that of Edinburgh, as to render unnecessary a lengthened recurrence to this subject. The Saxons denominated the whole country, lying along the sea and the forth, Lothian; afterwards it was divided into three parts, called, from their relative situation to each other, East Lothian, Mid Lothian, and West Lothian. In 1020 this district, with other parts of the Lothians, was ceded to Malcolm II. In succeeding centuries the shire suffered the horrors of pillage and conflagration on all occasions of the armies of England being sent to invade the country, or to molest or punish the capital. In 1296, and again in 1650, the sanguinary battles of Dunbar were fought within the county; and in the critical year of 1745, it was the scene of the conflict at Prestonpans—since which period it has enjoyed almost uninterrupted repose and tranquillity.

SOIL AND SURFACE, PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—In point of soil, cultivation and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland; and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear a comparison with the most favoured districts of England. The greatest elevations in East Lothian, above the level of the sea, are Traprain Law, 700 feet; North Berwick law, 940; and Shartleton Hill, 1,615. During the reigns of David I., Malcolm IV. and William the Lion, the acreage of this county was in the possession of only a few barons, who, at their pleasure, disposed of not only the lands, but the men who lived upon them, without hindrance. In these times the kings, the nobles, and the churchmen, were all tillers of the soil; and in this district every manor had its hamlet, its church, its mill, its kiln, and its brewhouse. The monks, indeed, were indefatigable husbandmen, and by their labour and skill gave the county its first character for agriculture. In this point of view, it may be divided into four districts. The first is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil. The second is a ride of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river, and partly towards the coast-land; it comprehends a great proportion of the arable land of the county. The third consists of a tract varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the mountains nearly the whole extent of the county. The fourth comprises an extensive range of mountains, which commences at the south-west extremity of the shire, and terminates in a high promontory called St. Abb's Head; the greater part of this is moor, but some spots between the hills are kept under a regular rotation of crops. Having nearly two sides begirt by the sea, the county derives a great part of its beauty and opulence from this circumstance. So commodiously has nature disposed the surface of East Lothian into ranges of hills and fertile dales, that some tourists, from topographical retrospection, have declared Haddingtonshire to be the Northampton of Great Britain. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in the county as early as the twelfth century; and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the thirteenth—the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirleton castle, having subsisted on the pease which grew in the adjacent fields. The thriving state of the agriculture of the county in the fourteenth century is noticed by Fordun. He says, in 1336 East Lothian was embroiled in warfare, and its field operations impeded by the outrage committed by Alan of Wyntown in carrying off, by violence, one of the daughters of the Earl of Seton; and he adds, that so great was the ferment upon this occasion, that the labour of a hundred ploughs was suspended during a whole year. The fertility of East Lothian in the seventeenth century is ascertained by a passage in 'Whitelock's Memoirs,' where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland, in 1650, were astonished to find in that district 'the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw, not one of the fields being fallow.' But it is since the period of the union that, in this district particularly, agricultural improvements have manifested themselves extensively and beneficially, and called forth the exertions and science of spirited individuals, proprietors of the soil: these have introduced the best systems of husbandry, and employed the most approved implements and machines—have drained, planted and enclosed, until East Lothian has become one of the most beautiful and productive shires in North Britain. The application of steam power here to the laborious operations of threshing, &c., present to the eye the aspect of a manufacturing district, from the number of tall chimneys which rise in every direction. Exclusive of farming, which is the chief pursuit of the inhabitants, many on the coast are employed in fishing, fish-curing, salt-making, and commercial occupations; but manufactures are not extensive in any part of the county: linen and woollen manufactories once existed, but have been long discontinued; the principal articles now exported from East Lothian are corn, whisky, ale, porter, coal, earthenware, soap and fish. The west of the shire abounds with coal; besides which, limestone and red granite constitute the chief mineral substances.

RIVERS, &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay. The shire is destitute of natural lakes, but this deficiency seems no way injurious to the district, and is amply made up by the Frith of Forth, which yields a large supply of fish. The North British Railway passes through the county, and possesses stations in all the principal towns; there are also one or two branches diverging from it.

Haddingtonshire comprises twenty-three complete parishes and two parts of parishes, and three royal burghs—Haddington, Dunbar and North Berwick: these join with Lauder (in Berwickshire), and Jedburgh in (Roxburghshire), in sending one member to parliament, and the county at large returns another.

ABERLADY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

THE parish of Aberlady lies on the south coast of the mouth of the Frith of Forth; it is very fertile, and contains an area of six square miles: it is bounded on the south by Gladsmuir and Haddington, and on the east also by the latter parish and Dirleton. The beach here presents such facilities for the disembarkation of an invading force, that in the course of the last war, when Britain was menaced with invasion by France, serious apprehensions were entertained, in all the southern districts of Scotland, that the enterprising Bonaparte might have thought proper to select it as one of the chief points of attack, in order to divide the operations of the British. The village is situated 15 miles W. from Edinburgh, 5½ W.N.W. from Haddington, and 4½ S. from Dirleton, at the head of a long flat sandy beach, and at the mouth of the small river Peffer. James VI., by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant it was said was confirmed by Charles, in 1633, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are not manifest in the present day. The Earl of Wemyss and March is patron of the parish; the seat of this nobleman, Gosford House, stands nearly a mile south-west of the village. The edifice, which is surrounded by beautiful enclosed grounds, contains a valuable collection of rare paintings, which are shewn, in a liberal and courteous manner to visiters. About a mile from Aberlady, on the north east, is Luffness House, a mansion belonging to Sir Alexander Hope, built in 1549, as a fortification by the French general, de Thermes, for the purpose of awing the garrison of Haddington, then in the possession of the English. The parish church is a neat structure, and the parochial school is a well-conducted institution.

ATHELSTANEFORD.

THIS parish lies on the north-east boundary of Haddington, and is separated on the north by Dirleton, from the mouth of the Forth; and the small village lies within 5½ miles S. from North Berwick, 5 S.E. from Aberlady, and 3 N.E. from Haddington. It contains a neat and modern church, a parochial school, and a brewery. This parish possesses considerable interest from the circumstance of having for its ministers successively, in the early part of the last century, two men of eminent poetical genius—Blair, author of 'The Grave,' and Home, the author of 'Douglas,' to whose memory the inhabitants, assisted by the subscription of others, have erected a handsome monument in the centre of the village. The manse occupied by the first mentioned, stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard. The site is now comprised in the minister's garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On the author of 'Douglas' leaving his pastoral charge, which he did from disgust of the proceedings instituted against him by his presbytery and the kirk in general for the publication of so secular a work, he built and retired to an elegant mansion, in the neighbourhood, still exhibited as a pattern of his taste.

DIRLETON, WITH GULLANE, FENTON, KINGSTON,
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DIRLETON, one of the neatest rural villages in this county, and perhaps in Scotland, is 20 miles E.N.E. from Edinburgh, 7 N. from Haddington, 4½ N.E. from Aberlady, and nearly three W. from North Berwick; charmingly seated at the head of a low meadow, extending about a mile and a half towards the sea—the houses, which for the most part are built in a plain, neat, Gothic style, having tastefully arranged gardens, nearly surround an extensive triangular green, interspersed with trees. On the south side of this space, stands the venerable and magnificent ruin of Dirleton Castle, embosomed among evergreens, and its massive towers richly clothed with ivy. The origin of this castle is lost in the darkness of the middle ages—it is ascertained, however, to belong to a noble family, in the ninth century, named DeVallebus or DeVaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious siege, by Edward I, in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general, Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century, this castle and the estate bestowed the title of Earl of Dirleton on the Halyburton family.

From ancient documents, it would appear, that a collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Halyburton; but little is known of its character or site. The present parish church, which stands a little below the green, is a handsome erection, bearing date 1661, and considerably enlarged in 1825—it has a substantial square tower. The parish school stands near the church. The parish, which extends about six miles in length, by four and a half in breadth, is low, and with the exception of a sandy stripe along the shore, which is used as a rabbit warren, is fertile to a degree not surpassed by any district in East Lothian, yielding excellent green crops and pasture. Besides Dirleton, the parish contains three other villages, namely—GULLANE, FENTON, and KINGSTON.

GULLANE, or Goolan, is a small but respectable village of rather ancient aspect, two miles south-west from Dirleton. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed, by act of parliament, to Dirleton, and at the same time changing the name of the parish to its present appellation. On the east side of the Links, stand the ruin of the ancient kirk, which was dedicated to St. Andrew, and was well endowed. It is mentioned by Grose, that the last vicar of the church of Gullane, before its abandonment, was deprived of his living by James VI, for no other misdemeanour than that of smoking tobacco, a custom which the king, it is said, held in abhorrence. On the small bleak island of Fidra, lying off this coast, was an ecclesiastical structure, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague; and its windows acted as beacons to the mariner at night, in warning him of the dangers of an unsafe shore. The Links in the vicinity of Gullane are the habitation of vast numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren at a considerable rent; the markets of Edinburgh are supplied with great quantities annually from the burrows here. The downs of this neighbourhood have been long celebrated for rearing and training race or fine riding horses.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY.
ON THE NORTH BERWICK LINE

DUNBAR,

WITH BELHAVEN, EAST BARNS, WEST BARNS, SPOTT, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DUNBAR is a royal burgh and sea-port, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish and of the eastern part of the district of East Lothian; 28 miles E. from Edinburgh, 11 E. from Haddington, and 30 N.N.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed; occupying a slightly elevated piece of ground on the shore of the North Sea, and the North British Railway passes on the south side of the town, where there is a handsome station. Dunbar, at a very early period, was considered a place of strength and commercial importance; but there was no harbour, until Oliver Cromwell, by a grant of £300, began or promoted the construction of one, which now forms the east pier of the present harbour; in 1820 it was improved, with the addition of a good dry and graving dock. About six years ago, a new harbour, called by permission of her Majesty 'Victoria harbour,' was built at the joint expense of the town and fishery board. It occupies a space of about five acres, and affords ample accommodation to the vessels and boats frequenting Dunbar for fishery purposes. On the west side of the harbour, and within high-water mark, stand the venerable ruins of a castle, which in former ages must have been very extensive and formidable; it is based upon rocks, but the date of its erection cannot be conjectured: it was always considered a station of great defensive consequence, as a key to Scotland on the east border; and it has been often besieged, and as often bravely defended. In this castle Edward II. took refuge, after his defeat at Bannockburn; and to this secure asylum Bothwell fled, and left the unfortunate Mary in the hands of the associated lords, after the disastrous rencontre at Carberry hill: it was subsequently demolished by order of the Scottish parliament, and nothing but the dilapidated fragments of this once almost impregnable fortress are now visible, and these have been much reduced by the excavations for Victoria harbour. On a columnar rocky projection, between these ruins and the harbour, was the battery; this has been abandoned by government, and it is now used as a storehouse.

The town is built upon a gentle rise from the beach; the principal street is wide and spacious, and the chief thoroughfares are macadamised; the streets and best class of shops are lighted with gas; and a good supply of soft water is conveyed to the town, from a distance of two miles, by means of pipes. In High-street are branches of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland' and the 'City of Glasgow Bank,' and several insurance agency offices, and there is built, on a prominent site at the south end, a handsome place of worship in connection with the free church of Scotland. In Westport-street is a branch of the 'British Linen Company's Bank,' and at the shore is a custom-house. The houses are generally large and of pleasing exterior, and few towns present to the stranger a more agreeable and respectable appearance. Dunbar House, the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front faces the sea, and consists of two extensive wings, with a circular centre, forming an elegant elevated portico, supported by handsome corresponding pillars; on the top of the centre, at the back of the edifice and facing the street, is a finely executed large proportioned figure of that ideal animal the sphynx, in a couchant position, and the wings erect; the house is now unoccupied.

The herring fishery has long been a very considerable source of wealth to Dunbar. Frequently five hundred boats are at the station, and since the opening of the railway large quantities are sent, in a green state, to the inland counties—sometimes to the extent of two to three hundred tons a day. A great weight is also cured into white or red herrings, and are then exported to the Baltic, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, and to Ireland; as many as ten thousand barrels have been cured here in one season. Cod-fishing is likewise a profitable pursuit here; the produce is mostly despatched to meet the London demand; and Edinburgh is also a market for white fish, lobsters, &c., in great supply from this port. The district around Dunbar is one of the richest and best cultivated in Scotland, and produces a much greater supply than is required by the inhabitants. The chief exports are corn and fish, and the imports coal and timber. The manufactures of Dunbar were at one period numerous and extensive: the most important branch now in operation is fish-curing, comprising several extensive concerns; three large breweries, a rope and sail yard. The domestic trade furnishes all the necessary articles of life, and the shops exhibit a respectable display of useful and fashionable productions. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II., and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James VI.: it was governed by a provost and three baillies, a treasurer, town clerk and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. An act of parliament for reducing the number of the municipal corporations in Scotland, has now limited the number of corporate officers in Dunbar to a provost, three baillies, a treasurer, and seven councillors. This burgh joins with Jedburgh, Lauder, Haddington, and North Berwick, in returning one member to parliament.

At the southern end of the High-street stands the elegant parish church, the erection of which commenced (on the site of the old kirk) in the summer of the year 1819, and it was opened on the 16th of September, 1821: its architectural style is the modern Gothic, and the body of the edifice is very commodious, containing eighteen hundred sittings; a very handsome square tower, with a pinnacle at each corner, embellishes the structure: the entire of the building is of a rather dark red stone, not unlike brick when seen at a distance; but the quality of the material is considered of superior excellence and durability: the completion of the fabric cost upwards of £8,000. The interior is enriched with a beautiful marble monument to the memory of George Home, lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI.; the height of this fine memorial is 26 feet, and its breadth twelve: while the church was re-building, the most judicious care was taken not to injure or disturb what is deemed the finest piece of tomb sculpture in Scotland. The Seceders have two places of worship here; the free church, the Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists each one. The town has the advantage of a good grammar school, wherein all the useful branches of education are taught: a commodious new building was erected in 1823 (on the beach, near the church), consisting of two wings, with a house for the master in the centre; it is an addition of great utility and convenience to this excellent establishment. There are several other excellent private schools in town, one under the management of the free church. Other institutions, belonging to the burgh and parish, of a praiseworthy nature, are well sustained—amongst these are a Mechanics' Institute, the Dunbar Parochial School (situate at WestBarns), and charity and infants' schools, for children of either sex, of the humbler class.

The country about Dunbar is exceedingly pleasant; and the prospects from the high grounds, which rise gradually from the sea-coasts, are expansive, and present a variety of delightful objects; the most striking of these are the North Berwick Law and Tantallan Castle, the Bass, the Isle of May, the Frith of Forth, and the mountains of Angus. The parish of Dunbar extends about eight miles along the coast; the soil is rich and dry, and produces all kinds of crops as early as any in Scotland. The market, a bulk one, is held on Tuesday, the grain is all weighed, and delivered immediately on being sold. There are two annual fairs—one on the first Tuesday after the 26th of May, the other on the first Tuesday after the 22nd of November.

BELHAVEN is a remarkably neat village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay of the sea, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of lord to a branch of the family of Hamilton. Between Belhaven and West Barns are the Seafield brick and tile works. These works first established on a very small scale by the late David France, Esq., have since the commencement of the tenancy, in 1850, of Mr. William Brodie, been gradually developed until they are now considered (on account of the superior class of machinery used, and the immense quantity of drainage pipes made) one of the most extensive and best manufactories of the kind in Scotland. Besides drainage pipes a considerable quantity of bricks for building purposes, roofing-tiles, &c., are manufactured here.

EAST BARNS is a village in Dunbar parish, about three miles south-east from that town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village there is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

WEST BARNS, another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile west from Belhaven. In this village, on the river Biel, are established the town's extensive corn and flour mills, there is also a brewery, and a manufactory for agricultural implements. Here also is the parochial school of Dunbar, an excellently conducted and numerously attended institution.

SPOTT is a small rural village in the parish of that name, situated two miles south from Dunbar. The parish is of an irregular figure, being about five miles in length by two in breadth; the low country is well enclosed and cultivated, and the higher grounds afford good pasture. Spott House, in this parish, is romantically perched upon a rock, rising from a low glen, surrounded with beautiful pleasure grounds. In this neighbourhood was fought, on the 3rd of September, 1650, the battle of Down-hill (so decisively unfortunate to the royal cause), in which the Scotch forces were totally routed by Cromwell.

FALA & SOUTRA, WITH HUMBIE, & BLACKSHIELS,

FALA and SOUTRA, an united parish; the first of which is within the eastern border of Edinburghshire, the other in the county of Haddington. The villages of Fala and Fala-Dam are situated on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder, about 14 miles from the former, and 11 from Haddington. The parish comprehends part of the Lammermoor ridge, of which Soutra hill is the north-west point. From the foot of the hill the surface is nearly level, having a tolerable fertile soil; and the lands are in a high state of cultivation. The kirk of Fala stands on an eminence over-hanging the road.

The parish of HUMBIE lies in the south-western part of Haddingtonshire; is bounded by Salton and Ormiston on the north, part of Bolton and Gifford on the east, and Fala and Soutra on the west. It is five miles in length, by rather more than three in breadth, lying chiefly on the Lammermoor range of hills near Berwickshire. The high lands are pastoral, but the low grounds are well enclosed and cultivated. Ironstone and coal are said to lie beneath the surface of some parts, but neither has been wrought. A church of the establishment, a free church and a parochial school are in the parish.

GARVALD AND BARO.

THIS, an united parish, is bounded by Morham and Whittingham on the north and east, and by Gifford on the west; extending from near the centre of the county southward, among the Lammermoor hills, to the borders of Berwickshire. Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. Among the latter are the ruins of Nunraw, a nunnery once of great importance, now the residence and property of Robert Hay Esq. The village of Garvald, a nice sequestered rural little place, is seated in a fertile valley, on the banks of the small river Hoper, or Hope burn, 22 miles E. S. E. from Edinburgh, 8½ S. W. from Dunbar, 5 S. from Linton, and nearly 6 S. E. from Haddington.

GIFFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GIFFORD is a respectable village, and the capital of the parish of Yester, 20 miles E.S.E. from Edinburgh, 9 S.E. from Tranent, and 4 S. from Haddington; charmingly situated on a rivulet, tributary to the Tyne. The village, which is well built, consists of two spacious streets, of unequal length, one end of the longest being ornamented by a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction and terminates at Yester House, the noble family mansion of the Marquess of Tweeddale—whose example and fostering influence has accomplished so much in advancing the agriculture of Scotland. The parish church stands at the eastern end of the shorter street, and the parochial school at the north end of the longer one: the former, which was erected in 1708, contains a pulpit of oak, of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called Knox's pulpit, so called from this celebrated preacher having been, it is said, born in Gifford, but which circumstance is denied by very creditable authorities, and the honour bestowed upon Haddington. The scenery around here is very romantic, and few places can boast of more picturesque or beautiful prospects than are presented to the eye in the neighbourhood of Gifford. Fairs are held here on the last Tuesday in March, the third Tuesday in June, and the first Tuesday in October: and the 'United East Lothian Agricultural Society' hold a meeting here annually, on the first Tuesday in October, for the show of rams.

To EDINBURGH, James Lidgate, Tues

HADDINGTON,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF BOLTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HADDINGTON, is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the county town of East Lothian, and the capital of the parish of its name; 17 miles E. from Edinburgh, 38 N.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 W. from Dunbar, and 9½ S. from North Berwick; eligibly and pleasantly situated on the left bank of the river Tyne, and is the terminus of a branch line from the North British Railway. Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV and William the Lion), dated 1178, she styled it Meum Burgum de Haddington. The suburb of the town, called Nungate, derives its name from a nunnery founded by Ada, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town; it was in this abbey or nunnery that a parliament was convened on the 7th July, 1548, during the siege of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary with the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. At the east end of Nungate is seen the roofless ruin of St. Martin's church, which has been but little used since the reformation. The town has suffered severely, at different periods, by conflagrations and inundations: in 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1358 whole villages were swept off by the overflowing of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, 'when' (it is related by a monkish chronicle) 'a nun seized the statute of the Virgin, and threatened to throw it into the flood unless she (Mary) protected her house from destruction—whereupon the waters gradually retired within its ordinary banks.' The last great conflagration which was accidental, occurred about two hundred years ago by the carelessness of a nurserymaid. The 4th of October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne 17 feet, at which height it continued for several hours; a plate recording this occurrence is fixed at the east corner of High street.

Considering the great antiquity of this burgh, it may be justly styled handsome. The streets, which are spacious are gas lighted by a company formed in 1835, whose works are erected at the west end of the town, in which quarter conspiciously stand the County Buildings: the architecture is of the old English style; they contain sheriff and justice of peace court-rooms, with appropriate offices, and jury and witness rooms, the erection of this building cost £5,470. The Town's Buildings, to which was added, in 1831, a fine spire, one hundred and seventy feet in height, at an expense of about £1,500, may be recognised as another feature of improvement to the burgh; they comprise the burgh council-room, assembly and public reading room, and the goal; this pile which evidently has been erected at different periods, forms the extreme western end of that long range of buildings separating the spacious High street from the equally wide Market street where is held one of the most animated grain markets in the kingdom. The suburb of Nungate is approached across the Tyne by the Waterloo-bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; as also by another bridge, ancient and narrow of three small arches. The corporation of this burgh consists of a provost, three baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and eighteen councillors; they hold a court every Monday; a sheriff and commissary court sits every Thursday; one for small debts every alternate Thursday; a justice of peace court the first Tuesday of each month (except those of March, May and August, when it takes place on the Thursday instead), a quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesday of the last-mentioned months, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter session on the second Tuesday in January. Haddington unites with Dunbar, Jedburgh, Lauder, and North Berwick, in returning one member to parliament.

The trade of Haddington consists principally in corn; on the market days immense quantities are brought for sale, and it is considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. The present manufactures comprise sacking, fire-grates, nails, and agricultural implements; there are likewise three breweries, three iron foundries, two tanneries, three corn mills, and a considerable distillery. Four banking establishments diffuse monetary accommodation—a branch of the British Linen Company's firm, the 'Bank of Scotland,' 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' and the 'City of Glasgow Bank.' An agricultural society was instituted in Haddington long since, and another at Salton; they were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums nearly £300: the Marquess of Tweeddale is patron.

The parish church is a venerable and capacious structure; it was in former ages the place of worship of the Franciscan monks, to whose extensive religious establishment it was attached; from its architecture and some traditionary records it is supposed to have been erected about the twelfth or thirteenth century; the west end is the only portion now used, in the repair and improvement of which nearly £6,000 were expended in 1811; the east end of the ancient monastery and the old square tower, are now a ruin; in a corner of the edifice is the burial-place of the Lauderdale family, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or 'Lennox's Love,' at present the seat of Lady Blantyre; and in the aisle there are many statues of the Lauderdale succession, large as life, reclining on beds of state. The designations of the other structures for divine worship, with their respective localities and minister are given in a subsequent page. The charitable institutions are numerous, and highly creditable to the burgh, as are the educational establishments; and several societies and clubs are established on the most respectable footing, for various laudable objects. Haddington lays claim to the honour of being the natal place of that unbending reformer John Knox, and the house where it is contended he was born was not long since generally pointed out in Gifford-gate; the village of Gifford, however contests this claim.

The weekly market is held on Friday: the sale of oats and barley commences at half-past twelve, and of wheat at one; that of dairy produce, poultry, &c., at half-past nine in the morning. Trysts are held on the second Friday after the 4th of May, and on the Friday before the second Monday in November; fairs on the second Tuesday of July and the second Thursday of October. The agricultural society hold their meetings here, for the show of stock, implements, seeds, &c., on the first Friday of April, and on the Friday before Christmas-day—the latter being their anniversary meeting; they hold their meetings at Salton and Gifford.

BOLTON is a parish and village—the latter a small one is situated on the road from Haddington to East Salton, three miles south-west from the former. About the close of the 15th century the lands of Bolton were wrongfully seized by the Hepburns, : one of which infamous family, John Hepburn, was executed as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief, in the murder of Darnley. The church and the parochial school are both in the village: the former is a handsome substantial erection, in the modern Gothic style, ornamented with a square tower; the latter is a well-built and judiciously conducted institution.

INNERWICK AND OLDHAMSTOCKS.

THE parish of INNERWICK, is bounded by Oldhamstocks on the east, Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacus (in Berwickshire) on the south; it measures ten miles in length, by a breadth varying from two to three. The land towards the sea-coast is level and very fertile; inland, it rises into gently swelling hills, which are ornamented with a variety of plantations, and the fields are all well enclosed. The village of Innerwick is 30 miles E. from Edinburgh, 14 E. from Haddington, and 4 S.E. from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick.

The Established church, which was built in 1782, and is a neat edifice, stands on a judiciously selected site, close by the village; there is also a Free church, situated about half a mile from the village, about a mile east of which, is the modern and handsome mansion of Capt. James Hunter, of Thurston; and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick, are the remains of the castle of that name. The situation of the ruins is rather secluded; they stand on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divided the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons, of Innerwick, was besieged, taken, and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. There are likewise the remains of several military encampments in the neighbourhood.

OLDHAMSTOCKS parish is between seven and eight miles in length, by a breadth of about two. The parish of Innerwick bounds it on the north-west, west, and part of the south, and Cockburnspath lies on its east. The soil is dry and fertile on the sea coast, and the land rises gradually towards the Lammermoor hills, which are chiefly pastoral. The village is situate three miles south-east from Innerwick, in a valley on the road from Dunbar to Dunse. Dunglass, the elegant modern mansion of Sir John Hall, Bart., ornaments that part of the parish near the coast. Dunglass castle is occasionally noticed in Scottish history; it was originally one of the many strongholds of the Earls of Home, and still gives its title to Lord Dunglass. In 1640, the Earl of Haddington, with several others who had joined the covenanters, took possession of Dunglass Castle, for the purpose of watching the garrison of Berwick. While here, the Earl received a letter from General Leslie, and was standing in the court yard reading it to the company there assembled, when the powder magazine blew up, which, throwing down one of the side walls, overwhelmed his lordship, together with his auditors, who all perished in the ruins. The deed is said to have been perpetrated by one of the Earl's faithless attendants, who ignited a barrel of gunpowder with a hot iron. An extensive fair is held at Oldhamstocks, the first Tuesdays in July and November, for sheep and cattle.

LINTON IN PRESTONKIRK,

TENTON, WHITEKIRK AND TYNNINGHAME, AND WHITTINGHAM.

LINTON, or EAST LINTON, is a village in the parish of Prestonkirk; 22 miles E. from Edinburgh, 8 S.S.E from North Berwick, 6 W. from Dunbar, and 5 E. from Haddington; eligibly situated on the left bank of the Tyne.

The parish church is at PRESTON, about half a mile north-east from Linton; in the latter are United Secession and Presbyterian chapels and parochial Free Church schools. The parish of Prestonkirk measures about four miles each way; the surface is agreeably varied, and the soil fertile and well cultivated. About a mile south-west of Linton are the ruins of Hailes Castle, noted as having been one of the residences of Mary and Bothwell; and one mile north of the village is the elegant mansion of Smeaton. From the southern part of the parish rises the mountain of Traprain Law to the height of seven hundred feet above the level of the sea. A market or meeting is held at Linton every Monday during the harvest season, for hiring reapers.

STENTON is a parish and small village—the latter situated four miles and a half east from Linton. The principal object of attraction in the parish is a beautiful artificial serpentine piece of water, about a mile south-east of the village; it is nearly two miles in length, and averages about four hundred yards in breadth, though in some places it is double the latter proportion, and in others much narrower; and its course is so sinuous that the stranger can form no just idea of its length its banks are high, steep, and well clothed with wood and the scenery throughout the meanderings of the lake is of a delightful and picturesque character: by the urbanity and kindness of the proprietress Lady Mary D. Hamilton, of Raith, parties are allowed to ramble through the grounds and plantations, or make excursions upon the lake, the accommodation of boats for that purpose being provided. A fair is held at the village on the last Tuesdays in June and October.

WHITEKIRK is a very small village in the united parish of Whitekirk and Tynninghame, four miles north from Linton; it consists of but a few humble dwellings, the ancient parish church and manse, and the parochial school.

Two miles south from Whitekirk is TYNNINGHAME village, also inconsiderable both in size and population. The elegant family seat of the Earl of Haddington, Tynninghame House, is half a mile from the village, enchantingly environed by woods and walks of superlative beauty, at the head of a park sloping gently southward to the Tyne, near its mouth.

WHITTINGHAM is an extensive parish reaching from the borders of Berwickshire a length of eleven miles northward, but varying in breadth from six to four miles, and still narrower in the middle. In the northern division of the parish are the beautiful pleasure grounds and plantations surrounding the fine mansion of Whittingham, the seat of Lady B. Balfour. The village, a very small one, is three miles south from the village of Linton, and six east from Haddington.

POST OFFICE, LINTON, Grieve Smellie, Post Master.—Letters from EDINBURGH arrive every morning at twenty-five minutes past nine, and from EDINBURGH and HADDINGTON again in the evening at a quarter past seven; and are despatched to EDINBURGH and HADDINGTON every morning at twenty minutes past nine, and to EDINBURGH, ENGLAND, &c., every evening at ten minutes past seven.

Letters arrive from BERWICK, AYTON, DUNBAR, and ENGLAND every morning at twenty minutes before eleven, and from BERWICK again in the evening at eight, and are despatched to AYTON in the morning at twenty minutes before nine, and to BERWICK, DUNBAR, and also to ENGLAND every evening at twenty minutes past six.

Money Orders are granted and paid here.

NORTH BERWICK AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

NORTH BERWICK is a parish, containing a royal burgh and sea-port, 23 N.E. from Edinburgh, 11 N.W. from Dunbar, and 10 N. from Haddington; situated on a low sandy plain on the shore of the German ocean, at the entrance of the Frith of Forth, and on a branch of the North British Railway. It consists principally of one long main street, running east and west—another proceeding in a country direction, towards the sea—and two or three small ones, or lanes; in the street running seaward are some houses of a superior kind, with a few trees in front. The chief trade of Berwick is the export of corn, potatoes, &c.; the imports are coal and bones for manure. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier, but, although there is water enough for a large class of vessels, the rocks render the entrance so difficult that but small ones make the attempt; these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. Fidra roads, about two miles to the west, are considered perfectly safe. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens; and four miles to the east within two miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, the terror of seamen: it is a mile in circumference, and rises four hundred feet above the surface of the sea; the channel betwixt it and the land is deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels to and from London and Leith. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides, except by a narrow pass on the south-west, towards the land; a fearful caverened passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then be reached only by ladders, or a bucket and chains; it existed as a stronghold for a long period, was a state prison during the reigns of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III, for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. The Bass is inhabited by myriads of sea fowl, especially solan geese, and it affords pasturage for about a score of sheep, the flesh of which is in great request by epicures. Nearly opposite the Bass, and about three miles east of Berwick, are the interesting ruins of Tantallan Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of 'Marmion.' About a quarter of a mile south-west are seen the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by David I. for a sisterhood of Cistercain nuns; and not far distant rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is more than nine hundred feet above the level of the sea.

The date of the first charter, erecting Berwick into a royal burgh, is unknown—that instrument having been lost or destroyed; James VI, however, granted to it a writ confirmatory of all its former privileges, by which it is governed by two bailies, a treasurer, and nine councillors; the burgh joins with Haddington, Dunbar, Lauder, and Jedburgh, in returning one member to parliament. Behind the High-street stands the parish church, at the end of the Westgate is the United Secession chapel, re-built in 1831; in the latter thoroughfare is the commodious parochial school, and in the Market-place, where also is the Court House, is an infants' school, erected in 1830. The North Berwick Golfing Club meet at the 'Dalrymple Arms' inn and hotel on the first week in the months of May, June, July, and September. This is the principal hotel in the town; every accommodation may be had, and tourists, &c., can procure boats at all times to convey them to the rocks and islands.

Two annual fairs are held; one on the first Thursday after Whitsuntide, the other on the first Thursday after Martinmas, both old style.

CARRIER
To HADDINGTON, Charles Ramage Friday

PRESTONPANS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF PRESTON, COCKENZIE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PRESTONPANS is a market and post town, and burgh of barony; 9 miles E. from Edinburgh, 14 S.W. from North Berwick, 9½ W.N.W. from Haddington, and 3 E. from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Frith of Forth; and the North British Railway passes about half a mile to the west. The town consists principally of one long street (not remarkably handsome), running parallel with the Forth, without any public building worthy of particular notice. The harbour is situated a little to the westward of the town, and is called 'Morison Haven;' it has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks, and other articles made from fire-clay, common bricks and tiles, soap and salt: the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also a large brewery for ale and porter. Oysters are taken in the Forth, near the town, and considerable quantities are sent to the markets of Edinburgh and Newcastle, and even to London. The mines of coal are very rich in this neighbourhood; a seam of this valuable mineral is now being worked by Sir G. G. Suttie, Bart., the proprietor, at Preston Grange Colliery, within two hundred yards of the quay at Morison Haven, which is eight to ten feet in thickness—beneath which it is ascertained there exists eight or nine other strata, making an agregate body of workable coal of full forty feet: the roof of this mine is composed of a stratum of fire-clay from two to three feet thick, and a band of ironstone of six inches in thickness. The mines extend a considerable distance under the sea; that of the Preston Links Colliery, situated at the east end of the town, has already been driven two hundred yards beyond high-water mark. There are other collieries in the neighbourhood wrought successfully. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter: a suburb called 'the Kuittle,' or more properly Cuthil, the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally to the abbey of Newbotle: this division is possessed by Sir G. G. Suttie, Bart., before mentioned, who is also patron of the parish, which is one of the smallest in the county.

The places of worship are the parish church and a Free church. The parochial school, a subscription library, and some benefit societies are in the town; the principal charity, however, is Schaw's hospital, at Preston village—an extensive building, erected in 1831, in the old English style of architecture, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of the funds bequeathed by its benevolent founder, Dr. Schaw, in 1781. This institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of twenty-one boys, children of indigent parents—those of the name of Schaw, M'Neil, Cunningham and Stewart, having a preference of entry, the establishment is conducted by a governor and a matron. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Preston Grange, Drummore, and Northfield. Preston Tower, in this vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons, of Preston, is an attractive ruin. At the distance of a mile and a half from the town, at a hamlet called Meadow Mill, was fought the battle to which the name of Prestonpans has been appended, on the 21st of September, 1745, between the adherents of the Stuart family and the English troops under the command of General Cope, in which the latter were routed. In this engagement fell Colonel Gardiner; the house (Bankton House) occupied by this revered officer, and in which he expired after the battle, stands a little to the west of Meadow Mill, and is still pointed out to the enquiring stranger. The markets were held on Wednesdays and Saturdays; but Friday is now acknowledged as the market day.

COCKENZIE is a fishing village in the parish of Tranent, one mile east from Prestonpans, situated on the road leading to North Berwick and the shore of the Frith of Forth. It has a small harbour, substantially constructed by Mr. Cadell, for shipping the salt made here by him, and the coal obtained from his mines. A fair is held here on the first Thursday in November.

POST OFFICE, PRESTONPANS, Catherine White, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive (from EDINBURGH) from ENGLAND, IRELAND, &c. every morning at ten minutes past nine, and in the evening at ten minutes past seven, and are despatched thereto every morning at ten minutes past eight, afternoon at half-past two, and for ENGLAND and IRELAND (via BERWICK) at half-past five in the evening, and for EDINBURGH at half-past six o'clock.

SALTON (EAST AND WEST), PENCAITLAND,
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SALTON parish lies chiefly in a fine fertile valley, on the north side of the Lammermoor hills; is well enclosed and cultivated, and various parts of the district are embellished with thriving plantations. The village of EAST SALTON, a respectable one, is situated 15 miles E. from Edinburgh, 5 S.W. from Haddington, and the same distance S.E. from Tranent. The parish church, which stands in the village, was almost entirely re-built in 1805, in the modern Gothic style, and cruciform, having a fine spire ninety feet high. The celebrated Bishop Burnet had Salton for his first benefice, and for some years performed the duties of parish minister; and it was here that he used the only book of common prayer known to have existed in the episcopal church of Scotland during the reign of Charles II. This eminent churchman and historian bequeathed a valuable library to the parish, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing, and apprenticing thirty poor children; the proceeds of the bequest amount now to about £75 per annum. The small river Salton and the Tyne are boundary streams of the parish, which has abundance of excellent lime.

WEST SALTON, in the same parish, is about half a mile from East Salton; between the two villages is Salton Hall, an elegant mansion, the residence of Andrew Fletcher, Esq. The united East Lothian Agricultural Society hold a meeting at Salton annually, on the last Saturday in May, for the exhibition of young breeding stock. In the village is a good school-house, erected in 1803, where one half of the children admitted under Bishop Burnet's charity are instructed, the remainder being taught in the parish school.

PENCAITLAND is a rural village and parish; the former is situated two miles and a half north west from East Salton, the latter is divided into two nearly equal parts by the river Tyne. This district forms the eastmost limit of the great coal range of the Lothians; the coal here is of an excellent quality, lying about fifty-six yards deep, in a nearly horizontal stratum of two feet nine inches thick; an inferior coal is, however, obtained at only sixteen yards below the surface. Besides coal, the parish abounds in good limestone and freestone; there is also a substantially-built parochial school-house, and an ancient cross. About half a mile to the north-west is Winton House, an extensive pile, partly ancient and partly modern, formerly the residence of the Earls of Wilton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715. Fountain Hall, the seat of Sir John Dick Lauder, Bart. and Tyneholm House, are also handsome mansions in this parish. On the eastern side of the river, which is crossed by an old stone bridge, stands the parish church.

CARRIER.

To EDINBURGH, William Brotherston from Salton, on Saturday

TRANENT, GLADSMUIR WITH PENSTON, ORMISTON.

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TRANENT, a town or post-village in the parish of that name, is 10 miles E. from Edinburgh, 18 W. from Dunbar, and 7 W. from Haddington, situated on the main road from the latter town to the Scottish metropolis, at the head of elevated ground; and the North British Railway passes about a mile to the east. The town consists of a street running from west to east along the line of the public road, with another diverging from about the middle of it. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the adjacent collieries, which have been wrought in this quarter from the very first discovery of coal in Scotland; others are occupied in agriculture, and on the coast which bounds the northern extremity of the parish. A branch of the City of Glasgow Bank is established in the town.

The church, which stands at the foot of the town, is a plain edifice, with a square tower; Colonel Gardiner, who fell in the battle of Prestonpans, was interred in it. There is also a free church, erected in 1844; the United Seceders have a handsome chapel, built in 1826; and there are three schools, one parochial, one belonging to the Free Church, the other subscriptional. Half a mile below the town, to the north-east, is Stiell's hospital, a neat and extensive structure, built in 1820; in it are educated one hundred and forty poor children, of which number ten receive clothing. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphingston Tower, once a baronial residence; and in another part of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton House, and the remains of a once collegiate church. A county market is held in Tranent, every Monday during harvest, for hiring reapers.

GLADSMUIR is a beautiful arable parish, rising in a gentle acclivity from the south shore of the Frith of Forth. The parish church and school stand on the main road between Haddington and Tranent, nearly four miles west from the former town and three east from the latter. The district abounds in coal, and several pits are wrought at PENSTON, which is the principal village in the parish, and chiefly inhabited by colliers. George Heriot, the founder of the hospital at Edinburgh, is said to have been a native of this parish; and Dr. Robertson was its clergyman, while engaged in writing the 'History of Scotland.' From the proximity of the hamlet of Gladsmuir to the scene of the battle of Prestonpans, that conflict was called, by the Jacobite party, 'the battle of Gladsmuir.'

The parish of ORMISTON lies in the western part of the county; it is chiefly level, under the best state of cultivation, and well enclosed and planted. The village is situated in the northern part of the parish, at the distance of two miles and a half north of Tranent, and consists of one spacious street, with a cross in the centre. The parish church stands a mile and a half to the south-west, and Ormiston Hall, one mile south of the village. One mile further, on the summit of an eminence called Dodridge Law, are the traces of a Danish camp. Fairs are held here on the first Tuesday in July, and fourth Tuesday in October.

INVERNESS-SHIRE.

THIS is a very extensive county, being the first in Scotland in magnitude, though only ranking the tenth in population: it is bounded on the north by the counties of Ross and Cromarty; on the east by those of Nairn and Moray—the frith of the latter also touching it on this quarter; on the south are the shires of Perth and Argyll, with a small part of Aberdeenshire; and the Atlantic Ocean washes its eastern boundary: a small insulated district between the shires of Banff and Moray belongs to it, and several of the Hebrides are politically attached to it. The county (excluding the isles) extends in length, from the point of Arisaig on the west to that of Ardersier on the east, about ninety-two miles, and its greatest breadth is nearly fifty miles: the whole surface comprises 4,054 square miles of land, and one hundred and ninety of lakes. Taking the computed number of acres at 3,000,000, little more than one-tenth are cultivated. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badenoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Glengany in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glengary, Glenmorison, Glenshiel, &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Eigg, Muck, Rum, and Canna; besides a number of islets.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The greater part of the surface of this county consists of lofty mountains, which, especially towards the west, tower above each other in stupendous magnificence. It would be vain to attempt a particular description of the scenery to be met with in this great county, comprehending, as already mentioned, so many mountains—between all which are deep glens of boundless variety and beauty, each having its stream and its lake, and many shrouded in woods. One of the mountains is, nevertheless, too conspicuous to pass over in silence—that is, the noble and celebrated Ben Nevis, the highest elevation of Great Britain, soaring to the height of 4,370 feet above the level of Loch Linnhe. This remarkable eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea; from its summit, in clear weather, a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland, from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and is toilsome in the ascent: it consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain—it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. Being cleft, in many places to the very base, by ravines and glens, its precipices are of prodigious altitude; one of them, the inaccessible eyrie of eagles, is nearly five hundred feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name: it was at the opening of this valley that the Marquess of Montrose achieved the brilliant victory of Inverlochy. The other remarkable eminences are Mealfourvonie, 3,600; Scarsough, 3,412; and Craig-Phadrig, 1,150 feet respectively above the level of the sea. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts, by a valley running from south west to north-east, parallel to the Grampians: this valley is called Glen-more-na-h' Alabin, or the 'Great Glen of Albion,' and appears to be a deep continuous rent between the chains of enormous mountains which range in the same direction; through the greater part of its length the glen is filled with water, or rather an almost connected succession of lakes, not rising very considerably above the level of the sea—a circumstance which suggested the comprehensive plan of forming the Caledonian Canal; of that stupendous undertaking we shall have occasion to speak hereafter. On the eastern side of the county, agriculture is conducted with as much skill, spirit and success, as in any district northward of the Grampians; in the interior, and on the western coast, it languishes under the natural obstructions of soil and climate. Along the whole of the western division, the climate is much more rainy than on the eastern side of the island; it is seldom fair weather in the latter with a westerly wind. On account of these disadvantages, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the management of black cattle and sheep, especially the former; numerous herds of goats are likewise to be found in almost every parish. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer and roe, who roam in safety through seclusions, and lodge in recesses impenetrable to man; the alpine and common hare, and other species of game, are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers. Additional roads have of late years been formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of much larger forests; the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey, the properties of the late Duke of Gordon and Sir James Grant, are supposed to be more extensive than all the other natural woods in Scotland if summed together. The trees that grow naturally are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, wildgreen, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry, are in the north-east or Lowland quarter, where there are to be seen many fine fields yielding good crops of wheat, barley, and oats; potatoes, in several parishes, are produced in great abundance. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, a very improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. In this shire, as in other counties in the north, the removal of the poorer native classes, or small farmers, by the landlords has thinned the population, expatriated thousands, and reduced to the lowest conceivable depths of human suffering those wretched families who have been permitted to remain in rude hamlets on the sea-shore. During the severe winters of 1836-7, and likewise 1846-7, the distress of the more indigent inhabitants of the Highlands (owing to the deplorable failure of their naturally limited crops, the extreme inclemency of the weather, and the almost total destitution of fuel), were of the most appalling description; in the islands, more particularly, this combination of calamities was experienced to a direful extent: in the Isle of Skye the want of fuel had reduced the unhappy occupants to such a state of desperation that, it has been asserted, lots were cast, among a certain number of poor families, to decide which should consent to the destruction of their hut, for the purpose of furnishing fire-wood for the general good. The case of these poor people excited universal sympathy throughout the kingdom, and subscriptions, headed munificently by London, poured in for their relief; the sum thus promptly raised was very considerable. Among the provincial towns of England, Manchester stood eminently conspicious in the humane and benevolent work. We now return, from this digression, to our more general and cheering account of the capabilities of this wide district. The exports of the county may be briefly enumerated in the articles of cattle, wool, and corn—the skins of goats, deer, roes, foxes, hares, and rabbits—salmon, herrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hempen and thread manufactures; the spinning of flax and wool is the occupation of the females, in their respective families, over the whole county: the principal imports will be detailed under the head of INVERNESS. Limestone is everywhere abundant; and in many parts are to be found marble, granite (the latter said to be the most beautiful in the world), and silver, iron, and lead ores.

RIVERS AND LAKES, CANALS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Frith; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire: the smaller rivers are the Beauly, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coiltrie, the Glass, the Morriston, the Ennetic, the Kinnie, with others of still minor note: the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in three leaps to the depth of, together, two hundred feet; a dense mist is continally seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The CALEDONIAN CANAL, before adverted to, is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with the sea on either side of the island by artificial water-courses and locks; and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerly direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Frith, to Loch Eil, on the western coast—a distance of about sixty miles. To connect the several lakes by artificial navigation, and thereby the Western Ocean with the North Sea, by the Moray Frith, was an undertaking to which a great portion of the public attention had long been directed; and it was at length commenced by government, in 1803-4. After a persevering labour of about eighteen years, and at an expense of upwards of £800,000, the line was opened for the admission of vessels in 1822: up to 1830, the total expense fell very little short of one million sterling. The canal part is twenty feet deep, fifty feet wide at bottom, and one hundred and ten feet wide at the surface—which affords sailing facilities to frigates of thirty-two guns, or merchant vessels of a similar size and draught: but it is mortifying to find that the facilities offered by this canal are so little appreciated by traders, that the annual dues fall far short of the sanguine calculations, the traffic upon the canal being mainly confined to steam-boats. Besides the lochs which have been made subservient to this great line of canal navigation, there are others of greater or less magnitude scattered throughout the district; and several arms of the sea advance into the western shore of the county. RAILWAYS have extended their iron influence to this remote county by means of the Great North of Scotland Railway from Aberdeen to Inverness.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends twenty-four complete parishes, and thirteen parts of parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being INVERNESS, which is a royal burgh; it joins with Fortrose (in Ross-shire), Nairn (in the county of its name), and Forres (in Morayshire), in sending one member to parliament; and the county of Inverness returns another representative.

BEAULY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BEAUTY is a village in the extensive parish of Kilmorack; 35 s.s.w. from Tain, 12 w. from Inverness, and 9 s. from Dingwall, standing on the south side of the river of the same name, as it pours into Loch Beauly, an inner branch of the Moray Frith. The situation of this place is beautiful, from the windings and falls of the river, and general appearance of the surrounding country—and thence its name, Beaulieu, that is 'fine place.' Some years since a small harbour was formed, to which vessels of one hundred and fifty tons burthen can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consist of timber, grain, and wool; the imports coal (from England) and lime. In other respects its trade is of a local character. There are branches respectively of the City of Glasgow Bank, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland established here; and three miles north-east of the town is the Ord Distillery, adjoining the famed district of Ferintosh, where, at one time, the privilege of distilling was permitted free of duty. There is at present in course of erection a very handsome Roman Catholic Cathedral, which will add considerably to the appearance of this neat little village. A sheriff's court for small debts is held in the months of January, May, and September, in which claims are adjudicated to the amount of £8. 6s. 8d. Verying upon the extremity of the frith stand the ruins of the priory founded in the early part of the thirteenth century, and peopled by monks from France, who gave to the place its present name: the venerable remains form an object of curiosity and interest to the tourist; but the falls of Kilmorack are pre-eminent in attraction, and present a scene of great natural beauty. The banks of the river are bold and rocky, and in the course of its windings it divides in such a way as to form the facinating island of Agas. There is excellent salmon fishing in the Beauly, and at the falls—many are occasionally caught by their leaping on the dry banks in their efforts to surmount the cataract. It is recorded that the late Lord Lovat, noticing the frequency of this mistake of that fish, once performed a curious experiment here: he made a fire on the brink of the river, and placed on it a large pot filled with water; speedily a salmon, making a leap in a wrong direction, tumbled into the pot, where it was soon boiled, and eaten by his lordship and his attendants: this was done that he might boast in the south of the wonders that existed in the highlands (which were then but little known), and to say that in his country provisions were so abundant that, if a fire were made and a pot set on it to boil, on the bank of a river, the saloon would of themselves leap into the pot to be boiled. Two miles further, to the westward of the falls, may be contemplated the splendid scenery of the valley of the Dhrium, allowed to surpass any other view in Scotland. Fairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord, from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they generally occur on the second or third Wednesday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trysts; the 'Edinburgh Almanac,' however, must be consulted with respect to the precise days on which they take place.

CAMPBELTOWN AND FORT GEORGE.

CAMPBELTOWN is a village in the parish of Ardersier, 31 miles w. from Elgin, 19 w. from Forres, 12 N. from Inverness, 8 w. from Nairn, and about a mile from Fort George; situated on the coast of a picturesque bay, and at the foot of an eminence called Cromwell's Mount, on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification, and, behind, the view is very extensive, embracing parts of eight or nine counties. This place, which originated only from the residence of those connected with the garrison, is now a village of some pretensions, and possesses many facilities of improvement—has a strong chalybeate spring, which is much frequented by invalids, and it is well adapted as a bathing place. The inhabitants support a public library, and there are two friendly societies, one of which is called 'His Majesty's Friendly Pension Society.' Some good inns are in the village, and several schools, of which two are boarding establishments. A court sits here on the first Monday in every month, for the recovery of small debts; and a fair is held annually on the 12th of August. The Parish church stands at the bottom of the bay.

FORT GEORGE, about a mile from Campbeltown, was erected immediately after the year 1746, at an expense of £160,000, in order to keep the Highlands in check. It covers fifteen acres of a level point, projecting into the Moray Frith, the ramparts, on three sides, rising almost out of the sea; it is said to be one of the most regular fortifications in Britain; it was mounted by eighty cannons, on four bastions, and completely commands the entrance into the harbour of Inverness. The present garrison, which as a work of offence or defence, is now happily useless, consists of a few artillerymen, and a depot of about two hundred men. A small pier projects from the fort into the sea, for the use of the ferry boats, which here communicate with he opposite coast of Rossshire.

FORT WILLIAM AND FORT AUGUSTUS,

BALLACHULISH NORTH AND SOUTH, CORRAN-FERRY, CORPACH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

FORT WILLIAM (formerly called Maryburgh and also Gordonsburgh), is a town and sea-port, in the parish of Kilmalie; 133 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 106 N.W. from Glasgow, 65 S.W. from Inverness, and 40 N.N.E. from Oban; situated on the eastern shore and near the head of Loch Linnhe. The chief branches of business are agriculture and fishing, and it is a place of considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. A communication is maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Crinan Canals, five times a week during summer, and twice a week during winter. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834, by the Society for Promoting the British fisheries, and by subscriptions at an expense of about £1,500. A very handsome suspension bridge of two hundred and fifty feet span was erected over the river Lochy by Donald Cameron, Esq. of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000. The town consists of one tolerably regular street, which contains some good buildings, and the branches of the 'British Linen Company's Bank,' and the 'National Bank of Scotland'—these establishments affording facilities for monetary commercial transactions in this remote part of the kingdom. Fort William is governed by a baillie, who is appointed by Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart., of Fassifern and Callart, proprietor of the place; and by the reform actit is appointed one of the stations for taking the votes of the county electors. The sheriff-substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session at Inverness.

The fort, from which the town derives its modern name, 'Fort William,' is a little distance north of the town, and was first founded in 1655, during the protectorate of Cromwell, by the advice and under the direction of General Monk; no part of what was then built is now standing; and the old barrack erected in 1692, from its ruinous state, has been condemned for some time. The garrison consists of a detachment of twenty men, a subaltern officer, and a barrack sergeant, and the battery is mounted with twelve twelve-pounders. The fort was attacked by the Highland clans under Prince Charles, in 1745, and made a successful defence. In the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, is a long established and sometimes very productive salmon fishery, the principal part of the produce of which is sent to London, Edinburgh and Glasgow. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Invernochy Castle, said to have been founded anterior to the Christian era: tradition may err in this particular, but it was certainly rebuilt, on its present extensive site, by an order from the Scottish government, in the reign of Edward I of England, by one of the Cumyn family, the western tower being still called Cumyn tower. It consists of four large round towers, thirty feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, twenty feet high and ten feet thick, forming a quadrangle of large dimensions: the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed; and in 1835 the then proprietor, the Marquis of Abercorn, with injudicious taste enclosed the whole structure at a considerable expense. In 1847 was erected at Fort William a handsome obelisk of granite, thirty feet high, by Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart., to the memory of his brother, Captain Peter Cameron. In 1852 a handsome monument was erected in High street, to the late William Kennedy, Esq., M.D. in commemmoration of his professional skill and unwearied benevolence. The most sublime object in this district, and one which attracts a crowd of visitors hither in the summer, is the majestic Ben Nevis: the ascent to the summit is difficult, and even perilous; but should the intrepid adventurer be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region on a fine cloudless day, the contemplation of the almost boundless expanse of prospect spread out far beneath his ærial position will amply compensate him for his toil and perseverance. The whole country, indeed, between Fort William and Glasgow is perhaps unequalled in Europe for variety of cenery. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in June and November, for cattle; and a great wool and sheep market on the first Tuesday after the second Thursday in July.

FORT AUGUSTUS is thirty miles N.E. from Fort William, situated at the south-west end of Loch Ness. This fort with Fort George on the Moray Firth and Fort William, above noticed are within the county of Inverness, the three forming a line of fortresses which were erected to overawe the Highlands, since the expulsion of the house of Stuart. They are now almost if not entirely useless, though still kept in repair and answering as barracks for a few soldiers and the residence of a barrack-master.

BALLACHULISH NORTH is situated on the north shore of Loch Leven, about 12 miles S. from Fort William. This place has a small neat church, of the establishment and a well-conducted parochial school. In BALLACHULISH SOUTH is a productive slate quarry, wrought by James M'Gregor, Esq. Fort William. Not far from the quarry is found valuable limestone, its product possessing superior adhesive qualities; and an extensive kiln was erected by Mr. Ewen Cameron: and it is now worked by John M'Gregor, Esq. About five miles east, near the margin of Loch Leven, is Callart, the elegant mansion of Sir Duncan Cameron, of Fassifern and Callart; and on the south shore, opposite to Callart near the entrance of one of the most romantic glens in Scotland, is Glencoe, formerly the property and residence of Ewen Macdonald, Esq., of Glencoe. Ballachulish North is united with CORRAN-FERRY NORTH (in Argyleshire), on the opposite side of Loch Linnhe, in one ecclesiastical parish; the latter is about three miles west from the former, and nine south from Fort William; it has a parliamentary church—and an inn, affording good accommodation. About a mile west, not far from the border of Loch Linnhe, is Ardgower House, the respectable mansion and family residence of Colonel Maclean, surrounded with fine plantations, at the foot of the Ardgowan hills.

CORPACH is a widely spread, but not very populous village, on the north shore of Loch Eli (in the county of Argyle, but in the same parish as Fort William), three miles north from the Fort; though this village is in Argyleshire, the principal part of the parish of Kilmalie, in which it is situate, is in the county of Inverness, and is surrounded by that county and Loch Eil. Corpach is chiefly to be noticed as being the southern commencement of that great national undertaking, the Caledonial Canal, which here enters Loch Eil by four locks; a little above are eight others, called 'Neptune's staircase;' they are capable of admitting vessels of three hundred tons (not drawing above twelve feet water), and each lock rises eight feet. A salmon fishery here belongs to Messrs. Moir & Son, Aberdeen; a large number of fish are preserved and shipped hence for the Liverpool market. Kilmalie parish church is situate about half a mile from the end of the canal, at Corpach; it was erected in 1784. Near the church stands a pyramidal obelisk, of considerable height, with a large tablet of white marble at its base, raised to the memory of Colonel John Cameron, who was slain at the battle of Waterloo, in 1815, while commanding the 92nd Highlanders. The road through Corpach leads to the district of Arisaig, about forty-five miles distant, and Moidart and Loch Shiel. At Borradale, in Moidart, Prince Charles Stuart landed on the 25th of July, 1745: he sailed up Loch Shiel on the 18th of August; the following day he landed and entered Glenfinnan, where he was met by Cameron of Loch Eil, and Macdonald of Keppoch, with their clansmen: commemorative of this circumstance, Macdonald of Glenalladale has erected a monument.

GRANTOWN AND CROMDALE.

GRANTOWN is a neat modern village in the parish of Cromdale, the latter lying nearly equally in this county and in that of Moray; Grantown being situate in that district of the parish called Inverallen, on the north bank of the river Spey, rather more than a mile south from Castle Grant, one of the seats of the Earl of Seafield; and at the distance of 35 miles S.E. from Inverness, 22 s. from Forres, 8 N.E. from Duthill, and 6 N from Abernethy. Grantown was begun about the year 1774, under the potronage of the Grant family, who have been its continued benefactors; and a large number of the inhabitants retain the name of Grant to the present day. The trade of the place is of a retail and domestic character, and there is a fair proportion of the ordinary useful shops and businesses which are usually found in a small country town. There are two distilleries in its vicinity, and in the village are established three banks, namely, branches of the National Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank, and the Caledonian Bank; there is also a branch of the Inverness Savings' Bank. Besides the church of the parish in Grantown, there is a royal bounty church, a Free church, and a Baptist chapel. There are several schools noticed under their proper head, and also an orphan institution. Fairs the first Tuesdays in the months of January and May, the last Friday in June, and the first Thursday in November, all old style.

To NAIRN, Lachlan Grant, Monday and Wednesday

INVERNESS AND ITS VICINITY.

INVERNESS, the capital of the large county of that name, is 156 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, 103 W. by N. from Aberdeen, 162 N. from Glasgow, 125 N.W. from Dundee, 134 S. from Thurso, and 27 W. by S. from Forres; situated upon the northern extremity of the Great Glen of Scotland, and upon the banks of the Ness (near the confluence of that river with the sea), about a mile from the northern entry of the Caledonian canal. 'Inverness,' says Dr. Johnson, 'may be properly styled the capital of the Highlands;' and it is so usually esteemed. We learn from Richards' 'Itinerary' (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170), that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the Jus Latinitatis: only two others in Scotland are mentioned, Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Bœthius, and after him Shakspere, assigns as the scene of King Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect. This castle, says the great poet—

> "—hath a pleasant seat; the air
> Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
> Unto our gentler senses."

Near to the site of this castle, a royal castle or fort was afterwards erected, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up during the rebellion; a new building (which will be hereafter noticed) now occupies the site of the old one.

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, even amid the dry technical details of its great charter; 'its good and pleasant situation' is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh. The eminent lexicographer, Dr. Johnson, in speaking of Inverness, adds—'The language of this town has been long considered as peculiarly elegant,' a fact which he ascribes to the intermixture of Cromwell's soldiers with the inhabitants; this is a fanciful hypothesis in many ways, and at once appears hardly reconcilable with the fact that the Gaelic continues to be the prevailing language still spoken by the common people; the soldiers must have learnt the one when they taught the other. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern bank of the Ness—here a broad, clear, and equably flowing stream. The streets are well paved, provided with common sewers, and during the winter months suitably lighted with gas. In the summer months Inverness is much frequented by tourists and sportsmen from the south, to the greater number of whom it forms the northern limit of their excursions. Being the centre to which the principal lines of roads in the Highlands converge—having the Caledonian Canal on the one hand, and the Moray Frith on the other—it maintains a rapid, frequent, and easy intercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail with magnificence as a whole—'uniting,' says a tourist, 'two opposite qualities, and each in the greatest perfection—the characters of a rich open lowland country with those of the wildest Alpine scenery; both being also close at hand, and in many places intermixed; while to all this is added a series of maritime views not often excelled.' The walks near the town are deserving of a stranger's perambulation: whether along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, or along the sea-shore, or by the margin of the canal; or to the singularly shaped hill of Tomnaheurich, or 'hill of the fairies;' or to the summit of Craig Phadrig (the vitrifications of which afford matter of speculation to the antiquarian); or to the druidical circles in the 'Leys;' in each and all of these directions there is much to please and interest the man of taste or science.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND WORKS. — Pre-eminent among these, as much for its architectural beauty as for its commanding position, is the Castle of Inverness, erected on the site of the old royal castle. The modern edifice was built in 1836 at a cost of £10,000, for the accommodation of the courts of justice in the northern circuit, and for the preservation of the records and transactions of the judicial business of the county, it is built from the design of Mr. Burn, architect, Edinburgh, after the old English castellated style, and harmonises well, from its varied projecting and receding masses, its square and round towers, with the waning outline of the surrounding scenery; it contains a court-room, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business and the convenience of the different functionaries connected therewith. In 1849 was erected, as an appendage to the castle, a very commodious new gaol. Amongst the other public buildings, institutions, &c. exclusive of the edifices for divine worship, are, the Town Hall, in High-street; the Northern Meeting Assembly Rooms, in Church-street: the Northern Infirmary, a large well-constructed building, with an imposing exterior, a little way out of the town, on the bank of the river; the Royal Academy, a liberally endowed institution, with a museum, in Academy-street; the United Charities' Building, and the Observatory, above View-place; Raining's school, a prosperous and useful one, on School-hill, and the banks.

Two other educational institutions must be noticed as highly efficient in the benefits they respectively confer—one of them, the Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's school, was established in 1842 by bequest of the late Dr. Bell, LL.D. of Madras, for the advantage of the middle and humbler class of children, who are instructed in all the useful branches of an English education—their number is generally about five hundred. The premises form an elegant building in an open and airy situation on the east side of the town. The front is embellished by a beautiful row of fluted columns. The Free Church Institution—another excellent establishment for training youth, was opened in 1846 in a large and commodious building, occupying an elevated site contiguous to the observatory. Among the public works are those for gas and water, the quays or harbours; the post-office erected in 1843, the bridges, &c. The old bridge, consisting of seven arches, erected in 1688, was on the 25th January, 1849, carried away by the overflowing of the river; and that portion of the town, lying on the north side of it, was completely inundated, and the inhabitants compelled to make use boats to pass through the street. A new and handsome suspension bridge has been erected at the joint expense of the government and the inhabitants—it is a very great improvement to the town.

COMMERCE, TRADE, &c.—At the quays and also at the Caledonial canal wharfs, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock Roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. The trade between this port and Aberdeen employs one steam ship and two schooners; between Inverness and Edinburgh two steam ships and two sailing vessels; and between Inverness and Glasgow there are two steamers plying on the Caledonian canal. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, wool, timber, salmon, &c. The imports comprise timber, Archangel tar, guano and wheat. In 1849-50 there were imported two hundred and thirty tons of hemp; six cargoes of timber: two of tar; four of guano (or 2,400 tons), and five of wheat, amounting to 1,927 quarsers. There is a ship building yard which is carried on with success; a manufactory for woollen cloths, and two breweries. The Aberdeen and Inverness Junction Railway has given to this town the facility of speedy communication with all parts of the kingdom, and has added much to the importance of the place. The produce of the breweries is chiefly for home consumption: the Thornbush Brewery is the oldest and the principal. There are no fewer than six banking companies established in Inverness, and a National Security Savings' Bank—these are noticed under their proper head in the Directory of the town. The premises of the Caledonian Bank, erected in 1849, from a very handsome building, on the north side of High-street; it is of freestone, having a row of elegant Corinthian columns in front, and is highly ornamental to the locality in which it stands. The shops in Inverness are well supplied with goods of every description; and are resorted to, not only by the inhabitants of the town and its vicinage, but also by those of the remoter vales of the shire, and by many from the contiguous counties. The press of Inverness publishes three newspapers weekly—the 'Courier,' the 'Advertiser,' and the 'Inverness Times.'

Inverness is a royal burgh of great antiquity, having, it is said, received a charter in 1067 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. The great charter of the town, however, was conferred by James VI, in 1591. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four baillies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one; considerable charitable funds are under their management. The burgh in conjunction with those of Nairn-Forres and Fortrose returns one member to the imperial parliament. Being the seat of the sheriff of the county, the courts of that functionary are held here—the sittings are on every Thursday from the 15th of May to the 25th of July, and from the 15th of October to the 4th of April. The sheriff's small debt court is held every Friday at the same periods for the recovery of sums not exceeding £8. 6s. 8d.; and a justice of peace court is held monthly for adjudicating claims not exceeding £5 in amount. This town is the appointed seat of the Inverness-shire Farming Society, and also of the Northern Meeting, composed of noblemen and gentlemen in the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands. They have large and elegant roooms in Church-street set apart for the purpose. A Mechanics' Institution and a Young Mens' Christian Association have also their supporters. Of the places for divine worship a list is appended to the Directory, with their localities and officiating ministers, and the educational establishments, parochial, endowed, or otherwise will be found under their proper head.

MARKETS AND FAIRS.—The markets are held on Tuesday and Friday; and the fairs are, 'Candlemas fair,' held on the first Wednesday after the 11th of February (old style), on the 11th if it should fall on a Wednesday. The last Friday in April (for hiring); the second Thursday in July for sheep and wool; the first Wednesday after the 15th of August for butter and cheese; the last Friday in October for hiring; the first Wednesday after the 11th (old styles) in November for produce.

We have extracted, with a few alterations, from 'Anderson's Guide to the Highlands' (an able, scientific, and well-got-up work), the following list of objects, in and about Inverness, worthy of being visited by the stranger:—

KINGUSSIE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KINGUSSIE, the gaelic name of which is the termination of the 'Pine Forest,' is the name of a parish and beautiful village, 44 miles S. from Inverness, and 73 N. from Perth, on the great road between the two towns; and 50 miles N.E. from Fort William. The district in which this village is situated is nearly in the centre of the Highlands of Scotland, where the genuine race of the Gael and their original language at one time, existed in its purity. The inhabitants, in the time of war, are fond of military life, and the 42nd and 92nd Highland regiments included many men from this quarter; the late Duke of Gordon was the popular colonel of these corps for many years. The commissioners of roads and bridges, in prosecution of their liberality towards the Highlands of Scotland, opened a beautiful new line of road, from Kingussie to Fort William, by Loch Laggan, through part of the remains of the ancient Caledonian forest, and in sight of the famed parallel roads in Glenroy. A more romantic route for the traveller than this by Loch Laggan is rarely to be seen. The Marquess of Abercorn has erected a costly and beautiful shooting establishment, Ardverykie Lodge, on the banks of the lake, which Her Majesty visited in 1846; it is now occupied by Lord Henry Bentinck. Another improvement in this district has been effected by the erection of a substantial wooden bridge over the Spey, which previously was only crossed by a ferry. The village stands on the north bank of the river, not far from the north base of those hills on which Norval's father 'fed his flock,' in sight of Cairn-Gorm, famous for its transparent stones, and Soul-Beiramuchduigh, one of the loftiest mountains in Britain. The village contains a small gaol, in which the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch are held monthly, and a sheriff's small debt court is held on the first Tuesdays in January and September.

The church, which is of modern erection, commodious and handsome, is on a hill at the east-end of the village, in a situation which is not to be surpassed for beauty. In 1844 a handsome Free church was erected capable of accommodating a large congregation. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the places of worship being still visible: one of the cemeteries is named after St. Columbus, and is said to have been originally dedicated to that holy personage. On the south bank of the river opposite the village stand the ruins of Ruthven Castle, which was a barracks in the reign of George II, and burnt down in 1745. It was a place of great antiquity and note, having been the residence and castle of Walter Cumming, Lord of Badenoch and his ancestors, who, at one period, lorded over almost all the Highlands of Scotland. Walter Cumming's oppression and tyranny became so intolerable to all within his power, which was very extended, that the Clan Chattan (M'Phersons) threw off the yoke, and expelled the tyrant from the country; for which deed of valour they acquired the red hand and dagger in addition to their coat of arms. Ruthven Castle was the rallying point of those brave but deluded heroes of 1745-6, where they assembled after the battle of Culloden, in considerable strength and high spirits, eager and anxious to be again led against the Duke of Cumberland. Balls and merriment were kept up by the officers and men for several nights, while expresses were despatched in quest of the prince, who was found wandering in the mountains, and making for the Hebrides, sunk in spirits and in deep despair, returning the answer to his faithful adherents that 'all was over with him.' Their loss at Culloden was nothing compared to the depression this caused to their spirits by disappointment. From that moment they dispersed, broken hearted, to meet no more. Three miles east of the village is Belleville House, the seat of Miss M'Pherson, and built by James M'Pherson, Esq., translator of some of Ossian's poems, &c. Near to the house and road side is a neat monument, to the memory of the 'bard of Morven;' and half way between it and the village, a little off the road, is to be seen a cave of great antiquity and curiosity, worth the stranger's notice. Eight miles south-west of Kingussie, on the Fort William road, stands Cluny Castle, the seat of Ewen M'Pherson, Esq., the chief of Clan Chattan. Eight miles to the east, close to the Spey and in a favourite spot, the romantic vale of Kenrara, are interred the remains of the late Duchess of Gordon, and on a rock in the same vale has been erected a beautiful monument of granite, ninety feet high, to the memory of the late Duke: it was raised by subscription amounting to £1,200. About five miles from Kingussie on the Perth road is Inverhawen Moor, celebrated for a hard-fought battle between the clans Macintosh and Cameron, and in which Cluny and the M'Phersons ultimately interfered; the consequence of which gave occasion, sixteen years afterwards, for the bloody contest between thirty M'Phersons and the same number of Davidsons, on the North Inch of Perth, in presence of King Robert III. of Scotland and his court, from which eleven of the former, and only one of the latter returned alive, and all seriously wounded. Partial notice of this memorable event is to be found in Sir Walter Scott's 'Fair Maid of Perth.' The hills of Badenoch are no where surpassed for the abundance of all sorts of game to be found amongst them, which brings a great number of noblemen and gentlemen to the country during the shooting season. The Earl of Stamford's summer residence is the Down, in the beautiful and romantic valley of Rothiemurcus, ten miles east of Kingussie. John Leslie, the celebrated Bishop of Ross, in Scotland, was a natural son of the parson of Kingussie, in Badenoch, and born there in 1527. He had his education in the university of Aberdeen, and in 1547 was made canon of the cathedral. He was the principal opponent of John Knox. There are several fairs held at Kingussie during the year, but the days of holding them are for the most part regulated by the Beauly and Falkirk fairs.

PORTREE IN SKYE,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF EIGG, RAASAY, RONA, &c.

PORTREE is a parish in the Isle of Skye, with a population in 1851 of 3575. The village of Portree is the principal one in the parish or the adjacent isles, and is a flourishing little seaport; 109 miles W. from Inverness, 108 N.W. from Oban, 75 N. from Tobermory, 21 E. from Dunvegan, and 24 N.W. from Broadford. Population in 1851, 850 The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep aclivity, thickly planted with thriving trees. It is of some business, has two banking establishments, a woollen manufactory in the vicinity, and two good inns and posting houses. In the mill, which was erected in 1850, are manufactured tweeds, plaids, yarns, and hosiery. About forty persons are generally employed within the building; but these form a very inconsiderable proportion to those who are engaged in the village and neighbourhood, as 'out-door knitters;' and the establishment proves of great benefit to the place. The quay, erected about 1819, has not much depth at low water, but the tide rises from twelve to sixteen feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth of from five to twelve fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, at whose base the quay is erected, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander M'Leod, from which there is a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. On the west of the village, amidst some thriving plantations, stands the house of Lord Macdonald's chamberlain; and on the south side of the bay, at a distance of nearly three miles, is the residence of the sheriff substitute, Thomas Fraser, Esq. (who holds a court here once a week during session), and the Manse of Portree. The votes of the county electors in Skye, for a member of parliament for Inverness-shire, are taken at Broadford. The chief exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt, herrings, salmon (pickled chiefly for London), and cod and ling, both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool.

SKYE is an extensive island on the western coast of Scotland, forming no inconsiderable portion of the county of Inverness, being the largest of the western isles, with the exception of Lewis. It is forty-six miles from north to south, and twenty-seven from east to west in a direct line; but the parliamentary road, commencing at Armadale in the south, and running chiefly on the eastern coast to Uig, in the north, is seventy-two miles long; and there is a cross road extending nine miles still further in the latter direction. The general face of the country is mountainous, which, although it may be inviting to the tourist from the sublime scenery it presents, is a great barrier to the successful operations of the husbandman; and the island cannot be called fertile if we except the narrow stripes of land in the valleys, and some parts near the coast. The eastern part of the island is separated from Glenelg, on the main land, by a narrow sound, called the Kyles of Skye. The island belongs to a number of proprietors, and is principally occupied in large grazing farms of six or seven miles in extent, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle, and some small horses. Formerly great quantities of kelp were made here. Eight miles south from Portree, in the district is known as 'Macleod's country,' may be contemplated some of the finest and beautifully-varied mountain scenery in the Highlands. This part also abounds with game; and lake and river angling may here be successfully pursued by the tourist, and refreshment and accommodation obtained at the Sligichan Inn, situated at the base of the celebrated Cullen hills. In this locality, among other interesting objects, the visitor will find the beautiful and famous 'spar cave,' Scarva, &c., Dunvegan Castle, once the princely residence of the chief of the Macleod's, is distant twenty-one miles from Portree, but is here noticed as one of the most ancient structures in the Highlands; it has been lately repaired and fitted up at a large expense, for the residence of Lord Hill. Not far from the castle is a convenient inn. In proceeding to Portree, from the south, is seen from the deck of the steamer, Armadale Castle, the seat of Lord Macdonald, agreeably situated near the shore, at the south-east corner of the island, amidst thriving plantations and sheltering woods. The fisheries on this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the main land, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the isle of Oransay on the south, and Dunvegan and Stein on the north.

The peculiar features of Skye are its romantic views, its mountain and water scenery, the charming seats with which the country is studded, as seen from different points, and some natural curiosities in certain localities. A particular notice of all the places worthy of a stranger's visit would occupy more space than we could devote to the subject; we cannot, however, omit noticing the small lake of Cornishk, about ten miles south-west from Broadford, whose sides rise almost perpendicularly from its deep black waters to a great height; also a spar-cave on the coast of Strathard, and about seven miles north of Broadford and Storr, is exhibited one of the most grand and imposing scenes in Scotland; this is a mountain seven miles north of Portree, whose summit is full two thousand feet above the level of the sea, the eastern side being a grand precipice of bare rugged rock, often rising perpendicularly five hundred feet; but the most remarkable feature about it, and which renders it dissimilar to any other mountain, are several detached pyramids, or almost perpendicular columns of rock, varying from three hundred to near five hundred feet in height; some standing at a considerable distance from the mountain, and appearing as though the intermediate parts, being too soft to resist the influences that acted upon them, had crumbled away, leaving the harder materials as a monument of their ability to resist the ravages of time and the ragings of the tempest. One of these isolated spiral masses of rock rises one hundred and sixty-five feet from the base, and is two hundred and forty feet in circumference: it seems at a distance to stand upon an apex, from which one might imagine it would be easy to remove it; indeed, the spectator cannot divest himself of the apprehension that it would fall upon him should he approach too near. The scene is altogether grand and imposing, and must be visited to be appreciated. The fairs in Skye are held as follows:—At Portree, on the last Tuesday in May and August, and third Tuesday in November, for black cattle, horses, &c.; at Broadford, on the Thursdays after the Portree May, August, and November fairs; at Fairybridge, on the second Tuesday in November; and at Sligichan, on the third Tuesday in September, for horses and black cattle.

EIGG, or Egg, is a small island in the Hebrides, belonging to Inverness-shire, about 12 miles S.W. of the promontory of Sleate, the most southern point of Skye. It is about three miles long from north to south, surmounted on the southern extremity by a perpendicular wall or rampart called the Scuir of Eig, composed of pitchstone phorphory columns, running about a mile in length nearly east and west, from 300 to 400 feet broad, and from 350 to 400 feet high, the summit being about 1,340 above the level of the sea. The Scuir is distinctly columnar, the pillars generally being about a foot in diameter; though there is a stratum of columns at the east end, inclining towards the horizon, whose diameters are from two and a half to three feet. The appearance of this singularly grand production of nature from every point is indescribably magnificent, and when viewed from the east end, assumes the form of a stupendous ruined tower. At the base of the rocks, on the north and south sides, several large caves have been formed by the softer part of the rocks crumbling away; the bases of the columns above form the ceiling of these caves, and, as in Staffa, present a resemblance to the surface of honeycombs. Two steamboats pass here on their way to Portree, and return every week in summer.

RAASAY, or Razay, is an island of the Hebrides, belonging to the parish of Portree, about thirteen miles long and two broad, lying to the east of Skye, opposite to Portree, separated from it by the sound of Raasay, about four miles wide. It is the property of George Rennie, Esq. of Raasay, who has a fine mansion in a bay near the south-western extremity of the island. There are other islands in the neighbourhood of Skye, as SCALPA to the east, RUM and CANNA to the south-west, &c.

RONA, or Ronay, is an island of the Hebrides, lying at the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait, just passable for vessels. It is about four miles in length by one in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona, surrounds the scattered village that lies at the bottom of the bay, which contains nearly all the population of the island

KINCARDINESHIRE,

OCCASIONALLY called the MEARNS (and improperly Mearns-shire), is a small county on the eastern coast; bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and on the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having to the sea its principal or most extensive base, and which reaches along the coast from the bay of Aberdeen to the mouth of the North Esk river, about thirty miles—its greatest breadth, inland, being twenty-four. The contents of the area, according to Mr. Gardiner, who surveyed the county for a map, were 243,444 English acres, of which 74,849 were in actual cultivation, 27,816 improvable by tillage, 17,609 woodland, and 123,170 mountains, &c. The government returns state its area to comprise three hundred and eighty-two square miles, or 243,200 statute acres.

NAME AND EARLY HISTORY.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts, &c., until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled into a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty, called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundations of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability, merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland, from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother, called Angus, conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the Hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the north of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth, inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro, since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless the great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men; and the men of the Mearns is a proverbial expression of old date—implying trust-worthiness and integrity.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, &c.—The county is now almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance; neither have manufactures made much progress in the district. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland; a sufficient proof of this is the fact that of all the lands in tillage nearly a seventh part is devoted to the culture of the turnip. The county is destitute of both coal and marl, and there is very little limestone—all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Frith of Forth. The limestone of the county obtained near the coast is burnt with coal; in the more inland parts with peat or wood; but, from the scarcity of fuel (no seams of coal being worked from Fife to Sunderland), there is much more lime imported into than is wrought in the shire. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful pebbles and jaspers are found. The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdle Ness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from sixty to eighty feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battoch, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabane, 2,370; Cairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare, from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfenella, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500, feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the country seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The most considerable rivers connected with this county are the Dee, the North Esk, the Cowie, the Bervie, and the Carron. The Dee glides for eight or ten miles through the northern limb of the shire; the North Esk is a boundary river on the south-west, for about ten miles; the Cowie has a course of ten miles through the county, previous to its falling into the sea at Stonehaven, where also the Carron empties itself; and the Bervie, after a progress of sixteen miles, discharges itself into the sea at the town to which it imparts its name. The Luther water can only be mentioned as a tributary stream to the North Esk. The only railway line passing through Kincardineshire is the Aberdeen, which communicates on the north with the city of that name, and on the south with Edinburgh and various other places. In this county it passes through or near to the towns of Stonehaven, Laurencekirk, and Marykirk, Drumlithie, Port Leithan, Auchinblae, and Banchory.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Kincardineshire comprises eighteen parishes and three parts of parishes: it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie and a burgh of barony—Stonehaven, besides several smaller towns and villages. Bervie, in connection with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin, and Forfar returns one member to the imperial parliament, and the county at large another

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN.

AUCHINBLAE, the capital of the parish of Fordoun is a thriving inland market town, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luther water, 26 miles s. by w. from Aberdeen, 16 N. from Montrose, 11 s. w. from Stonehaven, 6 from Fettercairn, 5 from Laurencekirk, and 2½ from the Fourdoun station on the Aberdeen Railway. The principal trade of the place is flax spinning by power, which was established so early as 1795, being the second attempt in Scotland. The weaving of linens by the hand-loom has been entirely given up. Branches of the North of Scotland Banking Company and the City of Glasgow Bank are established here. A Savings' Bank was commenced in 1815—it was converted into a National Security Savings' Bank in 1842: and the town was lighted by gas in 1840. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air, and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea-coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven, and Aberdeen. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn is a small assemblage of tenements, being all that exists of the former county town, Kincardine; and among these buildings, or in their vicinity, stood the Court House. It ceased to be the chief town in the reign of James VI, when Stonehaven, as a more convenient situation for holding the county courts, obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the castle or royal palace of Kincardine. There are no records stating the period when this castle was built, or when it was last inhabited, but it appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III. in 994—for it was occupied by that monarch at the time of his murder by Finella. It stands on the termination of a small ridge, at an elevation of about sixty or eighty feet above the adjoining plain, and has a very commanding view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. It was in this palace, as Lord Halles writes, that John Baliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296; and he quotes the record of this in Rhymer's Fædera. As this is the last event of importance on record connected with the history of this palace, it is not improbable that it was destroyed in the wars between the Scotch and English which followed that event. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment; and on the hill above Newlands there are the remains of a Druidical temple. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the foundations of a small friary; and near to that is a fine spring, considered to be among the most copious flowing in Scotland. The parish extends, from east to west, ten miles, and in breadth about seven; the southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil, and inferior in fertility to the lower part. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and placed on a high rock in one of the most beautiful spots in the parish, is a large handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a Gothic tower on the west end, rising to about one hundred feet in height; and in a valley between where it stands and the town of Auchinblae is situated the Free church, a neat well-finished building, but much smaller and of much humbler pretensions than its more aristocratic neighbour, perched on the rock. A market for the sale of cattle and grain, is held at Fourdoun station, on each alternate Friday, from October to the end of April; and annual fairs for the sale of cattle and the hiring of agricultural labourers, on the third Thursday of April (Paschal): on Wednesday after the second Tuesday of May (old style); the 26th of May (hiring); the second Wednesday in June (Cammock); the first Wednesday in July (old style); on the day after Kincardine O'Neil in September; and on the 22nd November (hiring).

BANCHORY-DAVENICK,

WITH COVE, PORT LEITHEN AND HILLSIDE, MARYCULTER, AND NIGG WITH TORRY.

BANCHORY parish lies on both sides the river Dee, near its confluence with the sea, and is partly in the county of Kincardine and partly in that of Aberdeen. The parish, which is for the most part rugged, heathy and stoney, extends about six miles along the river, with one extremity bounded by the sea: it contains the two small villages of HILLSIDE and PORT-LEITHEN—the latter near the promontory of Girdleness. The Aberdeen Railway intersects the parish.

MARYCULTER lies on the south side of the Dee, extending from that river to the Grampians; it is of an oblong form, being six miles in length by two in breadth. The whole parish is rocky, and the surface of the land encumbered with large stones which are a great obstacle to agricultural improvements. The district is well wooded, and here and there are to be seen some thriving plantations.

NIGG parish is situated at the extreme north-east corner of the county, near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains. It is bounded by the Dee on the north, which separates it from Aberdeen on the east, and on the south and west by Banchory-Davenick; it extends four miles in length by two in breadth. The coast is bold and rocky; the north-east point, called Girdleness, is a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay called the bay of Nigg, at the head of which stands the parish church. The district contains the fishing village of TORRY, which has a small harbour and pier.

POST OFFICE, COVE, Barbara Craib, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive (from ABERDEEN), at eight in the morning, and are despatched thereto at twelve at noon.

BANCHORY-TERNAN, DURRIS, AND STRACHAN.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish lying on the banks of the Dee, further up that river than Banchory-Davenick; it is bounded by Strachan on the south, Durris on the east, and Midmar on the north. The village stands on the north side of the Dee, at a distance of 18 miles s.w. from Aberdeen. In the parish are two or three lochs, in one of which is an artificial island bearing the ruins of an old mansion. The parish church, rather handsome, and a neat Free church are the places of worship.

DURRIS parish which extends about eight miles in length, by five and a half in breadth, lies on the south side of the Dee, from which the ground rises, and terminates in the ridge of the Grampian mountains. A great part of the parish has been enclosed and great improvements effected. The parish is bounded by Maryculter and Fetteresso on the east, and Strachan and Banchory-Ternan on the west; from the latter Durris is about six miles distant. There are several lofty mountains in this district.

STRACHAN parish is bounded on the east by Durris, Glenbervie, and Fordoun, on the south also by the latter parish and Fettercairn, on the west by Lochlee, and on the north by Banchory-Ternan; it extends eleven miles in length by from five to seven in breadth, and is for the greater portion a mass of hills, some of which belong to the range of the Grampians; Clachnabane, more than two thousand three hundred feet high, rises within the parish, the land of which is low towards the north, on which quarter it is bounded by the Dee and its tributaries, and here it is tolerably well cultivated, and some of it is planted.

BERVIE,

WITH THE VILLAGES AND PARISHES OF GOURDON, ARBUTHNOT, AND KINNEFF, WITH CATTERLINE.

BERVIE, (or INVERBERVIE as it is frequently written), is a royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and the chief town for many miles; 13 miles N. by E. from Montrose, 10 s. from Stonehaven, and 25 s. from Aberdeen; eligibly situated on the coast road from the last-named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, which river is crossed by a good bridge of a single arch, spanning one hundred and three feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for any vessel almost at any time. The basin could easily be converted into a very commodious and safe harbour, which would be the means of augmenting the general commerce of the place, and revive the fisheries on the coast. It is said that the city of Aberdeen, aware of the advantages that would arise from a place so admirably adapted by nature for a harbour, but entirely neglected by art, made overtures to the council of this burgh, some considerable time ago, to construct a harbour at their own expense, on certain conditions, but which were not acceded to. The principal trade of the town is the weaving of linen cloth and spinning linen; on the banks of the Bervie there are five mills employed in the latter operation, besides a meal and woollen mill; and as a grain mart Bervie is conspicuous. Bervie is admirably adapted for the purpose of manufacture to any extent; the river is a fine stream, and in the driest season it has always abundance of water; it runs through a large valley, in which the first mill that was ever erected for spinning flax in Scotland stands. The town is well lighted with gas.

Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter, from King David II., as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather; the place on which he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by David. The burgh is governed by a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nine councillors—it joins with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin, and Forfar, in returning one member to parliament. The sheriff's small debt court is held at Bervie on the third Mondays in January, April, July, and October. The places of worship are, a church of the establishment, and a Free church. The first-mentioned is a handsome modern building of Gothic architecture, and is the principal ornament of the town. The weekly market, considerable for grain, as before stated, is held on Wednesday, and the fairs on the Wednesday before the 13th of February, the Thursday before the 19th of May and September, the Wednesday before old Martinmas, and the Wednesday before old Christmas-day. GOURDON fishing village is one mile from Bervie.

ARBUTHNOT parish is of an irregular triangular form, nearly five miles in length, bounded on the west by Fordoun, or the great hollow of the mearns, the streams of Bervie and Forthy forming this line of division, and on the north-est by Glenbervie and Kinneff. The celebrated Dr. Arbuthnot, the intimate friend of Pope and Swift, was the son of the minister and a native of this parish. Arbuthnot gives the title of Viscount to an ancient family of the same name, which became distinguished in the twelfth century. Sir Robert Arbuthnot for loyalty to Charles I. was created a Baron and Viscount by that monarch.

KINNEFF, with which is incorporated the abrogated parish of CATTERLINE, lies on the sea coast south from Dunnotar, and bounded by Arbuthnot on the west, and Bervie on the south. It extends from the water of Bervie to the northern point about five miles along the coast, which is exceedingly bold and rocky. Upon the margin of the sea, not above a hundred yards distance from the church, are to be seen the ruins of a castle from which it is supposed the parish has taken its name; and tradition assigns it as having been the residence of a Scottish monarch named Kenneth.

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE.

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 18 miles N. from Montrose, 7 N. by W. from Bervie, and about 6½ S. by W. from Stonehaven; situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, on the road from the last-named town to Laurencekirk, and is a station on the Aberdeen Railway. The village is an assemblage of ill-built houses, so perplexingly arranged as to constitute a bewildering labyrinth. The parish of Glenbervie extends upwards of six miles in length by a breadth of three at some parts, and five at others. The soil in the upper part of the district is a bluish clay; in the lower a dry fertile loam. The northern part of the parish lies partly among the Grampian hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the west and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of GLENBERVIE, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family. A Free church and an Episcopal chapel are in Drumlithie, and a church of the establishment at Glenbervie. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the second Tuesday in October.

FETTERCAIRN.

IS a parish and village—the latter 98 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, 12 from Montrose, 16½ from Stonehaven, and 11 N. from Brechin, situated on a small streamlet, a tributary to the North Esk. The latter river is crossed by a romantic bridge called the 'Bridge of Gannachy,' which springs from a precipitous rock, at either extremity, and is elevated to a great height above the water. The village is lighted with gas, and has the advantage of a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank, and there is a large distillery in the immediate vicinity. In the village square is the old cross of Kincardine, an erection of great antiquity. About one mile west is a ruin called Fenella's Castle, connected with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fenella, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch, in rebellion. Besides the handsome parish church, there is a Free church and an Episcopal chapel, and two libraries are maintained within the village. The Fettercairn Farmers' Club, of which Mr. Vallentine is secretary, comprehends several contiguous parishes. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the mearns: the ground on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss; on the east it becomes deeper of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from a stupendous cairn of stone in the neighbourhood, a mountain monument to the heroes who died in some unrecorded battle. Fairs for cattle and hiring servants are held the day before old Whit Sunday and day preceding old Martinmas.

JOHN'S HAVEN, BENHOLME AND ST. CYRUS.

JOHN'S HAVEN is a thriving sea-port village, in the parish of Benholme, 14 miles S. from Stonehaven, and four from Bervie, situated at the bottom of a hill between the coast road and the sea, and a little off the main thoroughfare, between Aberdeen and Montrose; 29 miles S. from the former town, and nine S. from the latter. It contains an extensive manufactory for sail cloths, sackings, &c. which, with the weaving of linen cloths and fishing employ the majority of the inhabitants. There is also a good brewery in the village, and in its vicinity several limekilns. The parish of Benholme forms a square of nearly three miles, lying on the shore of the German Ocean, bounded on the north by Bervie, and on the south by St. Cyrus. The land is level on the coast, and the interior consists of hill and dale: beneath the surface is deposited good freestone and limestone. The tower of Benholme, before the invention of gunpowder, was considered a strong place of defence. The places of worship are the parish kirk, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians.

ST. CYRUS (sometimes called Ecclescraig), is a parish and village—the latter situated four miles from John's Haven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, which passes through the district. The parish, which measures five miles in length, by three in breadth, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholme on the east, Garvock on the north, Marykirk on the north-west, and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary. The surface is pretty level, but intersected with several glens and rivulets, and is elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths is arable. The Burn in Den Fenel forms a beautiful cascade, by falling over a rock sixty-three feet in height. The ancient residence of the Barclay family, known by the name of the Kane of Mathers, stands in ruins on a peninsulated rock, the base of which is washed by the sea. The castles of Morphy and Lauriston are also ancient buildings. The parish contains limestone quarries, and plenty of excellent freestone.

LAURENCEKIRK AND MARYKIRK.

LAURENCEKIRK, the capital of its parish, is a thriving and respectable village, 93 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, and 10 N. from Montrose, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and it is a station on the railway to that city. This village, which was formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1772, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh or barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. The village consists of a main street, nearly a mile in length, one parallel to it and two or three short ones branching from the principal streets, the whole well lighted with gas. It is governed by a baillie and four councillors, who are chosen every three years, and regulate the police, &c. A sheriff's small debt court is held here on the first Monday in February, June and October. Branches of the Aberdeen Town and County Bank, and the North of Scotland Bank, are established in the town. Near the village are two extensive flax-spinning mills and for the manufacture of linens.

The parish, which is sometimes called Canveth, is four miles in length, and three at its greatest breadth; a ridge of hills stretches through its whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district, and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the old parish Kirk dedicated to Saint Lawrence. Besides the established church there is a Free church, and Episcopal and Independent chapels. Fairs are held on third Wednesday in January (Saint Anthony's fair—old style); and cattle fairs on the last Thursday in April (old style), and the first Thursday in November (new style).

The parish of MARYKIRK lies on the north bank of the North Esk, at the extremity of the Howe or Hollow of the Mearns, and is bounded by Garvock and St. Cyrus on the east, Laurencekirk on the north, and Fettercairn on the west: it is four miles in length, by between three and four in breadth. The surface is level, and the soil, though various, is chiefly fertile; some fine plantations ornament the district, which is interspersed with a few handsome seats. The parish contains two villages, LUTHERMOOR and MARYKIRK; the latter is situated on the road about half way between Montrose and Laurencekirk.

POST OFFICE, LAURENCEKIRK, John Watt, Post Master.—Letters from the SOUTH arrive every morning at twenty-six minutes past three, and at half-past eleven, and are despatched thereto at half-past one in the afternoon, and at half-past three in the afternoon.

STONEHAVEN AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STONEHAVEN (or Stonehive) is a seaport, and the county town of Kincardine, 94 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, 68 N.E. from Perth, 66 S.S.E. from Banff, 35 N. by E. from Arbroath, 23 N. from Montrose, 15 S. from Aberdeen, and 10 N. of Bervie. It is situated within a mile of a station on the Aberdeen line of railway on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, in the bottom of a bay, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The place, which is considerable, though not a royal burgh, is composed of an old and a new town; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnotar; the other on a peninsula or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetteresso: the two towns are connected by a bridge, forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre; in this square stands a handsome market-house, erected in 1827, surmounted by a circular tower; a spacious hall, and a tavern range along the upper story, and shops beneath. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and on the north-east by a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal and lime trade, and occasionally in exporting grain to Leith. During the season a herring-fishery is carried on, to the great advantage of the place. There are five vessels belonging to the port, of the aggregate burthen of 465 tons. The celebrated Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and there is besides an extensive woollen manufactory, a tannery, and a brewery. There are three banking houses, and several good inns—Melvin's Hotel, at the railway station, has superior accommodation both for families and commercial gentlemen. The sheriff's ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session, and a sheriff's small debt court on the same day during the sitting of the first-mentioned court. A newspaper, the 'Stonehaven Journal,' is published here every alternate Tuesday.

The established churches of Dunnotar and Fetteresso are situated near the town; there is also a Free church, an United Presbyterian, an Episcopal, and a Methodist chapel. There are three cemeteries in the proximity of the town—namely, at Fetteresso and Cowie, one mile and a half respectively from the town, and at Dunnotar one mile distant; there is also at the latter distance an attractive garden open to the public. The principal object that can awaken interest in the vicinity of Stonehaven is Dunnotar Castle, about a mile and a half south of the town: it is seated on a perpendicular rock, one hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea, about three acres in extent, and almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The entrance is by a square tower of great strength, within high-water mark; the skeleton of the structure still occupies one-half of the summit of the rock, and forms one of the most majestic piles of ruins in Scotland. This castle withstood a long siege by Cromwell's army, and its ultimate surrender was upon honourable terms; it was often used as a state prison, and several of the nonconforming presbyterian clergy were compelled to be its inmates. It was built during the contest between Bruce and Baliol, by an ancestor of the Marischal family; and so great was its reputation for strength, that in 1651 it was selected for the depository of the regalia of Scotland, to secure them from capture by the English army. It was dismantled shortly after the civil war of 1715, when its proprietor, James, Earl Marischal, was attainted for high treason; since that period (the direct line of succession having failed), the castle has become by purchase the property of the nearest heir male, Sir Alexander Keith, of Dunnotar and Ravelston, Knight Marischal of Scotland. Though dismantled, the stone work of the fortress is yet pretty entire, there being in general nothing wanting except the roofs and the floors; the battlements, the formidable towers and airy turrets (full of loop-holes for the archer and musketeer), the hall for the banquet and the cell for the captive, are all alike entire, and their respective limits and divisions distinct.

The regular weekly market is held on Thursday, and there is another for cattle and grain on that day from Martinmas to Candlemas. Fairs, May 25th for hiring servants; on the third Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August (old style), for cattle; November 21st, for hiring servants, and the Thursday before Christmas-day (old style), for cattle.

KINROSS-SHIRE.

THIS is a small inland county, situated on the western boundary of Fifeshire, towards its south-western quarter—from which it was severed in the year 1426; Fife also bounds it on the southern side, and Perthshire lies on its northern and on its western limits. At the revolution, Kinross being considered too small a county as it then stood, was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Bleish, and Tulliebole, which parishes, before that period, formed a portion of Fifeshire. The general figure of the county is somewhat circular, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west eleven miles, or rather more; and from north to south about nine miles and a half. The total superficies of the county amount to seventy-two square miles of land, and seven of lakes; of cultivated land about 27,700 acres, and of uncultivated about 18,400 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least except Selkirk. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the 'head of the peninsula.'

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochill hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern, Benarty hill the south-eastern, and Cleish hills the south and south-western; these eminences are generally pastoral, and are adapted for the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise, in several places, suited to cultivation, and exhibit many pleasing and productive arable fields. The original condition of Ross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch, the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic, namely: the district has the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent, in this part of the country, than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appears, were feued about the commencement of the eighteenth century, from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of 'run-rig,' it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated or less profitable than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, enclosing, and planting—can compete with those of Fife, or most other districts: drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions, in this particular quarter, productive arable fields present themselves, where, only comparatively a few years ago, nothing met the view but desolate moors and sombrous mosses. At this day many good roads intersect the shire, and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving comfort-inspiring plantations. The mineralogy of Kinross-shire is a subject of limited importance; although coal abounds in some localities, no works for raising it have yet been established; whinstone has been found in various parishes, so has sandstone, of the best quality; of limestone there is plenty, and it has been wrought profitably.

RIVERS, LAKES, and RAILWAYS.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney, on the south boundary of Kinross parish; the South Quelch, that runs below the town of Kinross, and the North Quelch, on the north boundary of the parish—all which, and a few rivulets beside, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (which we shall have to notice particularly under Kinross town), lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven, there are a few minor lakes, or (as they are popularly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. The Fife and Kinross line of Railway, possesses a station in the town of Kinross.

KINROSS-SHIRE comprises only four complete parishes, and three parts of parishes; it possesses only one town, Kinross—with a large populous village in its neighbourhood, called Milnathort. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Clackmannshire in returning one member to the imperial parliament.

KINROSS, MILNATHORT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KINROSS, the capital of its county and parish, is a town of considerable antiquity, 27 miles N. from Edinburgh, 19 S.W. from Cupar Fife, 17 S. from Perth, and 10 N. from Dunfermline, which last-named town is approached by a branch line from the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee Railway. The town occupies a pleasant site at the foot of the open vale to which it gives name, on the north-western shore of Loch Leven. It formerly consisted of a number of sinuous lanes, composed of buildings of antique appearance, bordering on the lake; in later times it has undergone many extensive improvements in the erection of new houses, particularly in the main street, through which is the road to the north. In this street are the principal inns and shops. The principal trade here consists of the manufacture of woollen goods, and there are several agents for this business. Brewing, several corn mills, and the usual domestic trades, comprise the other branches. A newspaper called the 'Kinross-shire Advertiser' has been conducted here since 1847. As the capital of the county, the courts of the sheriffs sit here every Tuesday during session, and justice of peace courts are held as required. Years ago a spacious town hall was erected by subscription, on the site of the old parish church. The places of worship are the parish church, a handsome erection of modern date; a Free church, and two churches for United Presbyterians.

Originally the vicinity of Kinross was dignified by a castle of great strength, situated on a promontory jutting into the lake, and of which the town was a dependance. This ancient stronghold, long the residence of the Earls of Morton, was removed upwards of a century ago, and the promontory is now occupied by Kinross House, a structure designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House, and many other mansions, in the style of the time of Charles II. The environs of the town derive much of their beauty from the pleasure grounds and exuberant plantations around this edifice, which stands near the northern entrance to the town, and opposite to the island and castle of Queen Mary, on Loch Leven. This noble sheet of water is ten miles in circumferance, and contains four islands; the largest of which occupies about forty-eight English acres—upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanns), of which only a fragment now remains. On another stand the ruins of the Castle of Loch Leven, once the seat of the Douglasses, and in recent times rendered celebrated by Sir Walter Scott, as the scene in his novel of the 'Abbot.' Here the unfortunate Queen Mary was confined; and a bunch of keys, supposed to be those which the Queen threw into the loch when she escaped, was found a few years ago, and deposited in the antiquarian museum at Edinburgh. The place where the Queen landed, upon her escape from this island castle, May 2nd, 1568, was on the south side of the lake, and is still pointed out by the inhabitants to the numerous visitors who frequent this place in the summer time. There is a fine walk by the side of the water, which is much resorted to in fine weather. The loch is well stored with trout of a red colour and fine quality, eels, perch, pike, &c. A market, principally for corn, is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 4th Monday of March, second Monday of June, fourth Monday of July, and fourth Monday of October. There is a station of the Fife and Kinross Railway in this town.

MILNATHORT, popularly designated Mills o' Forth, is a considerable village in the parish of Orwell, one mile north-east from Kinross: it is neatly built, and is one of the most thriving and industrious villages within an extensive circuit; it is a station on the Fife and Kinross Railway; the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in weaving. The greater part of Orwell parish is fine arable land, well enclosed and planted, rising from the low shore of Loch Leven and the vale of Kinross, towards the north, in which direction it is hilly. On the low ground, towards the lake, stands the ancient ruined Castle of Burleigh, formerly the residence of Lords Burleigh. A church of the establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church, are the places of worship. A corn market is held on the same day as that at Kinross. Fairs the second Monday in February, the first Monday in May, the first Monday in July, the last Monday in August, the first Monday in November, and the Monday before Christmas, in December.

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE,

COMMONLY called a STEWARTRY, but in reality and to all intents and purposes a sheriffdom or shire, lies on the south of Scotland, and forms the eastern and by far the most extensive portion of the ancient district of Galloway. It is bounded by Dumfries-shire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway-Frith and the Irish Sea; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtonshire (or Western Galloway) and Wigton bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about forty-four miles, by a breadth varying from twenty to thirty miles, the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits: it comprises a superficies of 834 square miles, or 525,760 statute acres, including twelve square miles of lakes: about one-half of the whole surface may be said to be brought into cultivation.

EARLY HISTORY.—It appears that the denomination of 'stewartry' originated at the period when, by the forfeiture of the possessions of the Baliols, the Cummins, and their various vassals, this district became the property of the Crown, when it is understood to have been first put under the authority of a royal STEWART; in subsequent times the office of stewart, in the appointment of the king, was one of much honour, and was often the subject of contest. For a considerable lapse of time, however, after the establishment of a separate stewartship, the district was still in some measure esteemed to be politically attached to Dumfries-shire, but this nominal connexion was formally dissolved before the civil wars in the reign of Charles I. From the force of ancient usage, the appellation of stewart, instead of that of sheriff, has, down to the present day, been popularly continued, although, by the civil arrangements of modern times, there is not the least difference in the two offices. Events in early times, possessing considerable interest, are more immediately connected with Kirkcudbright, its capital—which was frequently visited by, and occasionally became the abode of, royalty. Edward I. spent some time there during the warfare of 1300; and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI. with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in that town.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE and MANUFACTURES.—The soil of the county is principally composed of a thin mould, or a brownish loam mixed with sand—and is incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock; the whole surface is interspersed with meadows, and mingled with moss. The shire has no statistical subdivisions, except that four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphain, Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan—are commonly designated the district of 'Glenkins.' The aspect of the country, however, forms a very natural distinction into two divisions: if a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Iron-Gray parish to the Gatehouse of Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is so mountainous, that it may with propriety be termed a Highland district; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country—a contrast strikingly obvious. The principal eminences in the shire are, Criffill (or Crawfell), 1,800 feet; Cairnsmuir, 1,728; Bencairn, 1,200, and Cairn, 1,000, above the level of the sea. Anciently the greater proportion of the land was covered with a forest, which is now eradicated, or to be traced only in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appears that, so early as the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the assiduity of the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin, to be manufactured into flour, in which state it was brought back to victual the various strongholds and castles held by that monarch. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats—the culture of barley, pease and beans being very limited. This age of agricultural prosperity was succeeded by destructive intestine wars, fanaticism, improvidence, and consequent misery, which lasted four hundred years, and reduced the country to a desert. It was not until the beginning of the eighteenth century that any measures were adopted to effect a recuscitation of its agricultural capabilities, which for so long a period had lain dormant. The enclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt at a series of improvements; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the rural population, who rose in considerable numbers, under the title of 'levellers,' and proceeded to demolish the newly-formed boundaries, under the influence of some extravagantly wild notions as to a natural general right in property; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employd for that purpose: this mischievous result of ignorance having been overcome, however, and the 'levelling' delusion dissipated, the county steadily advanced in an accelerated progress of improvement; and towards the close of the same century the district could compete with Dumfries and other adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The number of horses, cattle, and sheep reared in the county is sufficiently large to evince the possession of much practical knowledge, and consequent success, in this branch of productive economy; and the breed of swine has increased to a prodigious extent, these animals being now a staple commodity both for home consumption and exportation. The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland; and there is very little freestone. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carlinwark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell-marl; ironstone and lead ore also abound, but the deficiency of coal presents an obstruction to either being made available for the smelting process. Besides the salmon-fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Frith affords every opportunity for the capture of the inhabitants of the deep. The manufacture of linen, woollen, and cotton goods engages a considerable number of hands in the towns and villages.

RIVERS, &c.—Like other mountainous countries, this is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers; these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Urr. The Ken is considered the largest, receiving in its course numerous rivulets which drain the neighbouring hills, and even affording an asylum to the waters of the Dee, although the latter assumes the appellative privilege after entering the Ken. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Frith or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Frith, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of forty-five miles; and along the shore of this beneficial estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height.

A Railway is now being made from Dumfries to Portpatrick, which will run in a westerly direction nearly through the centre of the county. The first length was opened from Dumfries to Castle-Douglas in the summer of 1859.

The shire, or stewartry, comprises twenty-eight parishes, and contains two royal burghs—Kirkcudbright and New Galloway; the latter, in conjunction with Wigtown, Stranraer, and Whithorn (in Wigtownshire), sends one member to parliament; and the Stewartry, like the other counties of Scotland returns another representative.

AUCHENCAIRN AND DUNDRENNAN IN RERWICK.

AUCHENCAIRN, the principal village in the parish of Rerwick, is 8 miles from Castle Douglas, 12 E. from Kirkcudbright, and 22 S. W. from Dumfries: situated on the main road between the two last named towns. It is now rising into a village of some importance, in consequence of its excellent sea-bathing, for which purpose it is much frequented during the summer months. In the village are two excellent hotels, Scott's Hotel and Watson's, both affording excellent accommodation to tourists and to the visitors. In the mouth of Auchencairn bay lies the small island of HESTON, which stands high out of the water, and affords excellent pasture for sheep, and there are rabbits in great numbers. A fair is held on the first Monday after the 16th of August.

DUNDRENNAN is a small village in the same parish as Auchencairn, four miles therefrom, deriving its chief, indeed only importance from having in its vicinity the ruined abbey of Dundrennan, the greatest attraction in this part of the country. This abbey, the venerable remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. The church was built, as usual, in the form of a cross, with the spire rising two hundred feet from the centre. The body was one hundred and twenty feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, with a grass plot in the centre. From what remains of the edifice, the whole must have been built in a style of great taste and architectural beauty. The buildings are now greatly dilapidated, and are almost entirely covered with a pale gray-coloured moss, which gives a character of peculiar and almost airy lightness to the lofty columns and gothic arches, many of which are entire. This sacred edifice afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland. Tradition has traced with accuracy her course from Langside to the scene of her embarkation for England. She arrived at this spot in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery, then a magnificent and extensive building. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at the nearest point of the Coast; the road from the religious establishment thither runs through a secluded valley of surpassing beauty, and leads directly to the shore, where the rock is still pointed out by the peasantry from which the hapless queen embarked on her death-destined voyage; it is situated in a little creek, surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks, and called 'Port Mary,' in commemoration of the event. The scene is analogously wild and sublime; and besides being inspiritive of melancholy associations in the mind of the poet or romantic tourist, the coast here and in the neighbourhood merits the attention of the painter and the investigation of the mineralogist.

CASTLE DOUGLAS IN KELTON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF KELTON HILL, GILSTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CASTLE DOUGLAS is a modern, neat and thriving town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Kelton, 90 miles S. S. W. from Edinburgh, 18 W. by S. from Dumfries, 15 N.E. from Gatehouse, and 10 N.N.E. from Kirkcudbright; situated on the road between the two latter towns, and on that from Portpatrick to Carlisle, in a pleasant fertile district on the banks of the Carlinwark water, from which lake the original name of the place was derived. In 1792 it was erected by the proprietor into a burgh of barony by its present appellation, and its government vested in a provost, two baillies, and seven councillors. Eighty years ago it was composed of but a few detached houses; it has now upwards of four hundred and fifty respectable dwellings, laid out in regular streets, the principal one lining the public road. Altogether Castle Douglas may be considered one of the most respectable and prosperous little towns, although not of remote origin, in the south of Scotland. In the town-house, which is a commodious edifice, with a good clock, a court is held on the first Monday, monthly, for the recovery of small debts. There are three principal inns, and several others of a respectable character, but less elevated pretensions. In the town are also branches of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Company, the Union Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank; these branches facilitate its monetary transactions. On the south-west side of the town are the ruins of the ancient castle of Threave; and on its south-eastern quarter stands the modern and elegant mansion of Gilston Castle (formerly called Douglas Castle), now the residence of Mrs. Maitland. Carlinwark lake, before mentioned, is upwards of a mile in length, and occupies one hundred and eighteen acres; before it was partially drained, however by the canal cut from it to the river Dee, its area was much greater. It contains a number of small islands, one of which, in the middle of the lake, has been bound round its base with huge frames of oak; but whether the island has been artificially formed upon them, as some think, or they have been placed there with intent to support some vast superstructure, cannot now be decided. The lake is plentifully stored with pike and perch, and at its bottom is an inexhaustible treasure of the best shell marl.

Nearly a mile beyond the lake towards Kelton, stands the established church, frequented by the inhabitants of Castle Douglas and neighbourhood, which, with its burying ground at a short distance below the hill, are noted for their slovenly appearance. Near the church is Kelton manse, now occupied by the Rev. Samuel Cowan. A parochial school, and one connected with the free church, are in Douglas. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appear to have been the arena of much contest during the feudal system, when the ancient Douglasses dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of this district; for on the west side of the town are still visible encampments and breastworks, evidently thrown up against the castle; and on the south-west bank of the lake is a spot still termed the 'gallows lot' or 'plot,' said to have been the place of execution in former times. Near the head of the lake before noticed lived, it is said, three brothers, by trade smiths; they made the large cannon called 'Mons Meg,' shown at Edinburgh Castle: it was forged in staves, and hooped round like a cask. The market, a large one, for grain in winter and cattle in summer, is held on Monday; the grain is sold monthly by sample, and exported, some to England, and some to the north of Scotland. Fairs February 11th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday, for horses.

KELTON HILL (or Roan House) is a small village, in the same parish as, and about two miles and a half from Castle Douglas. Of the extensive horse fairs formerly held here only one is now maintained—the others being transferred to its more fortunate neighbour, Castle Douglas. The fair still retained is held June 17th (old style), or the following Tuesday, and is a considerable one for horses and hiring harvest servants

Nearly two miles from Carlinwark lake, in Kelton parish, is the small village of GILSTON, and its castle, formerly called Douglas Castle, and then the seat of the proprietor, Sir William Douglas, the founder of Castle Douglas. The present building, modern and elegant, is the residence of Mrs. Maitland. About two miles on the road towards Kirkcudbright is a small village called the BRIDGE OF DEE, of little, if any note, but that obtained from the number of Irish there located, and being the scene of frequent unseemly broils.

CREETOWN

IS a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Kirkmabreck, 117 miles S. W. from Edinburgh, twelve W. from Gatehouse, about 6 S.E. from Newton-Stewart, and three from Wigton, across the ferry. It was formerly called Ferry-Town of Cree, and derived that appellation, doubtless, from its situation—the town being seated on the east side of the creek of the river Cree, at the head of Wigton bay, and opposite the peninsula, on which stands the town of Wigton. It is a place of but little consequence as connected with commerce, the only trade it possesses being almost confined to the importation of coal and lime, and the exportation of grain and granite; the latter of which is wrought by the trustees of the Liverpool docks, from a fine quarry contiguous. The mail road from Portpatrick to Dumfries passes through the town, which circumstance conduces, in some degree, to its importance. This place is the property of Captain George Grant, whose mansion is a great ornament to it; and there are some few other handsome residences in the neighbourhood. The church, erected in 1834, is a neat building; connected with it is a public school.

POST OFFICE, Thomas Michael, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from PORTPATRICK) and the West, morning at twenty minutes before twelve and from DUMFRIES and the South every afternoon at twenty minutes past one and are despatched at the same times.

CROSSMICHAEL AND PARTON.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village—the latter a small one, 91 miles S. S. W. from Edinburgh, 19 S. W. from Dumfries, and 9 S.S.E. from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Lawrieston and Castle Douglas, Crossmichael being distant five miles from the former town and three and a half from the latter. In the village is the parish church, the patron saint of which, prior to the Reformation, was Saint Michael, and hence the name, though of the cross there are neither remains or traditions preserved. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee or Loch Ken on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the Dee water, furnish good perch and pike fishing. A fair is held on the 29th of October if it falls on a Thursday, if not, then on the Thursday after.

PARTON parish lies along the banks of the Dee, that water and the Urr being its western boundary; it extends from six to seven miles in length, its breadth varying from four to six. A large portion of the parish is hilly, heathy, and pastoral, especially in the northern quarter; towards the Dee the land is flat and arable, and under cultivation. What may be called the village, which contains but a few houses, the church (a neat building erected in 1834), and the manse, is about three miles from Crossmichael. The manse occupies a very pleasant situation fronting the river, and is surrounded by hills and wood. In the vicinity is an excellent slate quarry.

POST OFFICE, CROSSMICHAEL, John Kirkpatrick, Post master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from CASTLE DOUGLAS) every morning at half-past eleven, and are despatched thereto every morning at five minutes past nine.

POST OFFICE, PARTON, Mary Fraser, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from CASTLE DOUGLAS) every day at twelve noon, and are despatched thereto every morning at half-past eight.

DALBEATTIE-IN-URR AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DALBEATTIE, the principal village in the parish of Urr, is 87 miles s.s.w. from Edinburgh, 13½ N. by E. from Kirkcudbright, the like distance s. w. from Dumfries, and 6 from Castle Douglas, most elegibly situated on the Dalbeattie burn, a rivulet which falls into the water of Urr, which latter is here navigable for vessels of seventy or eighty tons. This harbour, which is called Dub-o-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway firth, and is now greatly improved. A line of railway from Dumfries to Portpatrick passes through this place, and possesses a station here. The village has great advantages in respect to situation for a maritime trade, having a communication by sea with the western ports, and, by means of the before mentioned railway, with many large inland towns; and it possesses some large falls of water, capable of turning any kind of machinery. The mills now in operation are, a paper, a bobbin, a corn, and a waulk mill, and two for sawing timber—the whole propelled by water; there is also an extensive smithy, the hammers of which are also worked by the same power. In the village are places of worship for Presbyterians and Roman Catholics, and two comfortable inns. About four miles north-east from Dealbeattie is Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells of Terregles. It is a fine old ruin, and mentioned as the place where Mary Queen of Scots passed a night, on her way for embarkation at the Solway Firth to England, after the battle of Langside Moor: the remains of the bed in which she slept is still in Terregles House. Within the parish, on the banks of the river, about a mile below Urr church, is the Mote of Urr, an artificial mount rising from the centre of elevated circles, and used in primitive times as a court of judicature by the petty chiefs of this district of Galloway.

POST OFFICE, High street, Elizabeth Currie, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from DUMFRIES every morning at ten, and from KIRKCUDBRIGHT and CASTLE DOUGLAS every afternoon at half-past two, and are despatched to CASTLE DOUGLAS and KIRKCUDBRIGHT every morning at ten, and to DUMFRIES every afternoon at half-past two.

GATEHOUSE-OF-FLEET AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

Gatehouse is a neat modern town partly in the parish of Anworth, but chiefly in that of Girthorn, 105 miles s. s. w. from Edinburgh, 50 e. from Portpatrick, 33 s.w. from Dumfries, and 8 w. from Kirkcudbright; charmingly seated in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed within hills and lofty eminences, which form a spacious and delightful amphitheatre. Some of the hills have their sides clothed, and their summits crowned with woods, interspersed with rich pasturage; while the higher and more distant mountains penetrate the clouds. The town is well built, regular, and clean, the houses being generally of the same height, the streets running in straight lines, and crossing each other at right angles. A good stone bridge crosses the Fleet, connecting the principal part of the town with that in Anworth parish. At the foot of the town flows the small river Fleet, which here meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of sixty tons burthen; and the navigation of the river has been considerably improved by the late Mr. Murray, who, at a cost of £3000 cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which, a commodious quay has been constructed by Mr. M'Adam, at an expense of £600, and he has received the thanks of the ship owners of Kirkcudbright for his spirited enterprise by which their shipping has been so greatly benefitted. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain; and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper have been discovered in the neighbourhood, which have been wrought to some advantage; specimens of copper from the Enrick mine shewn at the Exhibition of 1851, were pronounced to be the richest in Europe. Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, through the interest of the late Mr. Murray; its municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies and four councillors. A burgh court for the recovery of small debts not exceeding £5, is held every fortnight, and a justice of the peace court sits every month, for the parishes of Girthon and Anworth.

The parish church which is a commodious building, was erected in 1817, and its site well chosen. The Free church, at the other end of the town, is also a spacious and handsome building, and contiguous to it is a chapel for the United Presbyterians. The parochial school is well attended; a masonic lodge, a library containing upwards of 1,000 volumes, and a reading room well supplied with newspapers and periodicals, have their respective members and supporters. In this neighbourhood, in the parish of Anworth, are the ancient castles of Ruscoe and Cardoness; a mile south of the town stands Cally, the noble residence of the proprietor H. G. Murray Stewart, Esq.; and at the distance of about two miles, are the neat villas of Ardwall and Cardoness. The market is held on Saturday; and the fairs on the first Monday after the 17th of June (old style), and a cattle market or fair, the third Saturday in September.

POST OFFICE, Gatehouse, Samuel Blythe, Post Master—Letters from London and the South, and from Dumfries and Castle Douglas arrive every day at twelve noon, and from Portpatrick and the West, at seven minutes past one afternoon, and are despatched to Portpatrick and the West, at twelve noon, and to Dumfries, at seven minutes past one afternoon.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT,

WITH THE PARISH OF TWYNHOLM AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and capital of the stewartry and a parish; 100 miles s s.w. from Edinburgh, 55E. from Portpatrick, and 28 s.s.w. from Dumfries. It occupies a peninsular situation on the east of the Dee, about six miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Frith, is a town of considerable antiquity, but of its origin there is no authentic or even traditionary record; but that Saint Cuthbert's church was erected so long ago as the eight century is unquestionable. The establishment of this church was followed by the construction of a small fort by the lords of Galloway, which in after-times was superseded by a castle in the proprietary of the Crown, by whose authority the place was put under the government of a constable. During the domination of the Douglasses in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence: on their forfeiture, James II. erected the town into a royal burgh, by charter dated at Perth, 26th. October, 1455: this grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I., on the 20th July, 1633; and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two baillies, and thirteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain; it joins with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar and Lochmaben in returning a member to parliament. The revenue of the corporation is considerably increased by the salmon fishings in the Dee; and the town derives a certain degree of consequence and advantage from being the seat of the stewartry courts.

Kirkcudbright which has been materially improved, at the present day presents an aspect remarkably pleasing: within, it is regular, clean and neat; and externally it appears embosomed in the bountiful foliage of a fine sylvan country. It is composed of six or seven distinct streets, built at right angles with each other; the houses, which are for the most part two stories, high, have a respectable and comfortable appearance, and at once bespeak the taste and easy circumstances of the inhabitants. The stewartry buildings and gaol, erected in 1816, exhibit a highly imposing appearance; and from one of the lofty towers which surmount the latter an extensive view may be obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the ancient castle of Kirkcudbright, built in 1582, by M'Clellan, ancestor of the Lords Kirkcudbright. The former gaol and court-house is a very curious old edifice (with the market cross stuck up against it), supposed to have been erected about the middle of the sixteenth century. The burgh has a little shipping trade, and a productive fishery, and the intercourse with Liverpool, by steam navigation, gives animation to the town, and a stimulus to its trade. The manufacture of hosiery exists here to a limited extent, and the shops and inns are very respectable—of the latter, the 'Royal Hotel' and the 'Commercial' are the principal, the former being both family, commercial and posting. The harbour is the best in the stewartry, at ordinary spring-tides the depth of water is thirty feet, and at the lowest neap-tides eighteen feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the bridge of Tongland, which is constructed of one arch of one hundred and ten feet span, and picturesquely blends with the surrounding landscape. As yet there is no bridge across the Dee at Kirkcudbright, and passengers and carriages have to be ferried over in a flat-bottomed boat, or sort of floating bridge of peculiar formation; in stormy weather, however, or when there is an excessive current, this mode of conveyance is not without danger; and the construction of a drawbridge, to admit of vessels passing through, would be esteemed a great improvement as well as advantage to the district. There is a regular communication kept up between this place and Liverpool, by means of a steam-vessel, at least once a week.

The established church is of recent erection, with nave and transepts, and a fine tower surmounted by a spire; it is a very tasteful structure, built wholly of stone, and stands in the centre of a beautiful plantation through which are public walks. The Free church is a handsome building adjoining the Johnstone academy. In High-street is a neat chapel in which the United Presbyterian congregation worship. The ancient church has been pulled down, with the exception of a fragment, enclosing a venerable monument in memory of a former Lord Kirkcudbright; a recumbent figure of whom is in fine preservation. This portion of the ancient church is now appropriated to the Countess of Selkirk's school. The academy, or grammar school, is a handsome edifice, comprising a spacious room for a public subscription library. The Johnstone's free school is a chaste stone building, with centre wings, and a handsome tower, it is for the tuition of both sexes, and was opened September 12th, 1848. There are in the town, news and billiard rooms, a masonic lodge, and a mechanics' institute. The environs of Kirkcudbright are truly delightful: the rising grounds on each side of the river, from Tongland to the sea, are embellished with thriving plantations; and the general prospect, both marine and inland, is really lovely. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, the seat of the Earl of Selkirk, is about a mile from the town. The burgh is amply supplied with all domestic necessaries, and provisions are comparatively cheap. The market day is Friday, and there are two fairs, namely, on the 12th of August or following Friday, and the 29th September or Friday after.

TWYNHOLM is a parish and village, the latter a small one, is situated three miles from Kirkcudbright, on the main road from Gatehouse to Castle Douglas. The soil is fertile, and the surface of the district rises into many small hills, partly arable. Of the extensive woods with which this part of Galloway was formerly covered, the only remains now existing are around the old castle of Campstone, a building pleasantly situated on an eminence nigh the junction of the rivers Dee and Tarf. The village contains a small neat church of the establishment, and a parochial school.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM,

OLD BRIDGE OF URR, AND SPRINGHOLM.

KIRKPATRICK DURHAM is a parish and village—the latter a small one, is 85 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 14 S.E. from New Galloway, 13 W. from Dumfries, 7 E. from Parton, and 6 N. from Castle Douglas. The parish which is skirted by the Urr water on its western side, derives its name from the old church dedicated to St. Patrick, and Durham, a hamlet where it stood—the latter appellation signifying the 'hamlet on the water.' A new church in the Gothic style with a handsome tower, has been erected on the site of the old church, built two centuries ago. Formerly a woollen mill furnished employment to many inhabitants of the village, but it is now undistinguished by manufactures of any kind, and is a place of no trade but that which belongs to a few shops for the reciprocal accommodation of the inhabitants. The parish, which is between nine and ten miles in length, and about four miles in breadth, is partly pastoral and partly arable; the former character prevailing in the north, the latter in the south of the district. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the 17th of March, (old style.)

OLD BRIDGE OF URR is a very inconsiderable village in the parish of, and two miles from Kirkpatrick-Durham; seated on the banks of Urr Water and contains but a few houses and no business worthy of notice.

SPRINGHOLM is a small village one mile from Kirkpatrick, on the road to Dumfries. It contains a small Independent chapel, built about the year 1806; a monument in front of the chapel, was erected by public subscription to commemorate the memories of those brave covenanters, who lost their lives in defence of their principles. The village contains about 300 inhabitants, one public house, and a small mill for the manufactory of woollen cloth.

On the north west the village is skirted by a mountainous district, which abounds with various kinds of game: on the east the land is more fertile. The parish has several small lakes and a number of mineral springs, among the latter Lochenbreck Well is a place of some resort in the summer. About a mile west of the village is the mansion of William Kennedy Lawrie, Esq. the principal proprietor of it; and three miles to the east stands the parish church, with which a school is connected. A Free church is in the village, and that also has a school.

NEW ABBEY, KIRKBEAN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village—the latter, a small one, is 80 miles S. from Edinburgh, 12 E. from Dalbeattie, and 7 S. by W. from Dumfries, situated at the eastern extremity of the county, near to the mouth of the Nith. The parish, which was originally called Kirkinder, takes its present name from the once celebrated religious establishment of New Abbey, a monastery founded in the 13th century, for the Cistercian order of monks, by Dovergilla, daughter of Alan, lord of Galloway. The ruins, which occupy an area of two hundred and forty by one hundred and fifty feet, are supported on arches and Gothic pillars, and the area itself is used as a burial ground for Roman Catholics. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, are traced to an extent of fourteen acres. To the north-east are seen the ruins of the Abbot's house, and the footpath between the two buildings, a mile long, is still the kirk road. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambelly, and on the south Loch Kindar, and the dark braes of Criffle, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of two thousand feet above the sea, from which it is a mile distant. Besides that of Kindar, there are two other lakes in the parish, namely, Lochend and Craigend. Near the former is the spot where one of the early covenanters of this district met an untimely end. The school of Kessock stands on the edge of the lake; and the parish kirk, which was built with part of the ruinous materials of the abbey, is situated on the south side of the ruins. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffle range, stands a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo. It is of spiral form, ninety feet high, with a winding stair within. The base bears an inscription laudatory of the British troops and their allies.

KIRKBEAN is a parish and village—the latter, very inconsiderable, is situated in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, on the road to Dumfries. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birth-place of John Paul, otherwise Paul Jones, a 'sea adventurer,' who was born here in 1745, and was the son of an honest gardener in the place. The conspicuous mountain, called Criffle, stands partly within this parish, and within that of New Abbey; and there are within the former traceable ruins of the castles of Cavens and Weaths, both of which were the property and occasional residence of the Regent Morton. There are two other small villages belonging to this parish, called PRESTON and SALTERNESS.

POST OFFICE, NEW ABBEY, William Newall, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from DUMFRIES) every morning at twenty minutes before ten, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before five in the afternoon.

NEW GALLOWAY,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BALMACLELLAN, DALRY AND CARSPHAIRN.

NEW GALLOWAY is a small town and royal burgh, in the parish of Kells, 84 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 25 W. from Dumfries, 18 N. E. from Newton-Stewart, 14 N. W. from Castle Douglas, and 8 N. W. from Parton pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ken, over which was thrown in 1822, an elegant stone bridge of five arches; this structure lying in the valley below the town, has a very pleasing effect; at its completion, a dinner was given by the late Lord Viscount Kenmure, to fourteen of the oldest inhabitants of the town, whose united ages amounted to 1,264 years. The houses of the town stretch along the public road, and form a tolerably well-built-street. The business of the place is confined to the local domestic retail and handicraft branches. Galloway's burghal charter was conferred by Charles I., and the municipal government vested in a provost, two baillies and fifteen councillors. A justice of peace court is held in the first Monday in every month, for the recovery of debts under £5; attached to the court is a criminal and debtors' gaol, with a steeple and town clock. The burgh unites with Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn in returning one member to parliament.

On the north side of the town, within the distance of half a mile, is the parish church, a neat stone edifice, with a square tower in the centre, built in 1822; in the same year a Sunday school was established, in which upwards of one hundred children are gratuitously taught by the inhabitants. At a short distance south of the town stands the ancient castle of Kenmure once a place of considerable strength; Mary Queen of Scots lodged in it one night, on her way from this country to England. Loch Ken, which joins the town, is four miles and a half long, and in many places more than a mile broad; it abounds with pike and perch, and some of the former have been caught of the astonishing weight of fifty, sixty and seventy pounds. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after the 12th of April, the first Wednesday after the 12th of July, the first Wednesday after the 12th of August, and the first Wednesday after the 12th of November.

DALRY is rather a populous village, in the parish of its name, lying on the east bank of the river Ken: the southern portion of the district lies in a beautiful valley, composed of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village of Dalry (the name of which signifies 'the dale of the king,') is surrounded with delightful scenery; and there is a good inn (the Plough) at the command of the visitor. In 1858 the Town Hall or (St. John's Hall) was erected, it is intended for the purpose of holding public meetings, lectures, &c., it was built by subscription at a cost of nearly £400., and is a neat ornament to this place. There are several lakes in the parish; the largest, called Loch Invar, covers an area of fifty acres: in the lake stands the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and latterly Viscounts of Kenmure. Besides Dalry, there is a small village in the parish, called JOHN'S CLACHAN, agreeably situated on the margin of the Ken.

CARSPHAIRN village, which is situated near the river Deogh, contains a parish kirk, the manse, a parochial school and a few scattered houses. The parish is somewhat extensive, but thinly populated; it is the most northerly and mountainous district in the stewartry; and is chiefly devoted to grazing. This parish, with those of Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan, are designated the district of Glenkens—named for the true breed of black-faced sheep and black cattle, as also for good horses of the Galloway breed.

The small village of BALMACLELLAN, stands on the opposite side of the Ken to New Galloway, not far from the confluence of the stream with the head of Loch Ken, twelve miles south west of Minniehive. The parish is of a moory character, interspersed with some inconsiderable lakes.

OR GARDEN, is the principal village in the parish of Buittle, 18 miles S.W. from Dumfries, 14 N. from Kirkcudbright, and 6 S. of Castle Douglas; agreeably situated on the water of Urr, where there is a good harbour, having, at ordinary spring tides, a depth of thirty feet water, and capable of receiving vessels of two hundred tons burthen. It is the chief port for supplying the surrounding neighbourhood with coal and various other sea borne necessaries. The parish is bounded on the east by the Urr, on the south by the Solway Frith, and on the west by Kelton. It is a fertile and agricultural district, eight miles in length, three in breadth.

LANARKSHIRE,

OR, as it is sometimes designated, CLYDESDALE, is a large, populous, and highly important manufacturing district, in the western part of the Lowlands, or south division of Scotland; bounded by Dumfries-shire on the south, the counties of Ayr and Renfrew on the west, those of Dumbarton and Stirling on the north, Linlithgowshire and Edinburghshire on the south-east, and Peebles on the east. Its extreme length (from south-south-east to north-north-west) is somewhat more than fifty miles, and its greatest breadth in the middle (from east to west) is thirty two miles; it includes within its area nine hundred and forty-two square miles of land, and three square miles of lakes: about one-half of the entire is calculated to be under cultivation. At an early period this extensive district was, for convenience, divided into two wards, called the Over Ward and the Nether Ward—Lanark being the chief town and seat of justice of the former, and Rutherglen of the latter: this arrangement was altered during the last century, when the county was divided into three wards, namely, the Upper, the Nether, and Middle Wards—the chief towns being Glasgow, Lanark, and Hamilton, and each district subject to the jurisdiction of a sheriff-substitute. The central part of the county throughout is termed Clydesdale, or the vale of Clyde, from being the basin of that beautiful and useful river, of which we shall say more hereafter. Throughout the arduous struggle for Scottish independence, Lanark was the theatre of many miseries and military excesses. Under the reign of James I, a portion of the county was taken from it, and formed into the district of Renfrew. At a subsequent date, the turbulence of the Douglases, with the intrigues of the first Lord Hamilton, involved Lanarkshire in the various calamities consequent upon intestine warfare; it subsequently became subject to a thirty years' civil commotion, stimulated by the persecution of the more zealous presbyterians of this district by Charles II: the revolution of 1688, however, was the harbinger of a more tranquil future, and it has ever since advanced in wealth and every species of improvement.

SOIL, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, CLIMATE, &c.—The upper division of the county is very mountainous; from Tinto looking northwards, the face of the country is softened down to gentle elevations and gradual depressions. The Upper Ward, which may be deemed three-fifths of the county, is mostly hilly and moorish; and, from the nature of the soil and the altitude of the surface, cannot be considered susceptible of much agricultural improvement. At the commencement of the Middle Ward, the elevation of the land is obviously diminished, while the declivity continues descending towards the north-west; the surface is everywhere diversified by frequent inequalities, so as to leave no level space except the valleys along the river: indeed the Middle Ward, though esteemed a good agricultural district, is nearly one-third moss land. The Lower Ward is of very limited extent, and derives its justly acquired importance from being the seat of a most abundant population. The commencement of improvement in soil and cultivation, in this part of Scotland, was not apparent until about the middle or nearer the end of the eighteenth century: from this period, draining, planting, and enclosing took place in various districts: wheat, barley, and oats (the two latter more abundantly), are produced from different soils in the county; potatoes are planted in considerable quantities; turnips are sown pretty generally, and artificial grasses are profusely raised in every direction: some flax is likewise grown, which is spun by females, who dispose of the yarn in the markets of Lanark, Biggar, Carnwath, and other places. Gardens and orchards occupy many acres of land, particularly on the banks of the Clyde; in this part they are of the most luxuriant growth, the orchards consisting chiefly of apple, pear, and plum trees. The inhabitants of the inland and upland districts breed and graze great numbers of black cattle and sheep. In mineral productions, Lanarkshire is, perhaps, the richest in Scotland. Gold, to an important amount, was at an early period found in this county; and in later days, on the sides of a rivulet called the Wealhead, small pieces of that precious metal, in a pure state, have frequently been picked up from among the sand and soil brought down by the torrents from the precipices and slopes of the mountains: particles of gold have also been found in Crawford Muir, with some large pieces of lapis lazuli. At present, plentiful supplies of lead may be had in Crawford: and coal, ironstone, limestone, freestone, sandstone, whinstone, fire-clay, and a variety of other metallic, mineral and fossil substances are to be obtained abundantly in different districts of the county: the lead mines, belonging to the Marquess of Queensberry and the Earl of Hopetoun, afford employment and maintenance to many thousands of people. GLASGOW being the paramount seat of the Manufactures for which Lanarkshire is so eminently distinguished, it is unnecessary in this article to treat of the subject at any length, as under the head of that most important city unsparing notice will be taken of whatever is connected with its commerce and products: it need only be mentioned, in this place, that the cotton goods for which Glasgow is the vast depository, are, to a very considerable extent, woven in different villages and parishes in the county; and that this branch of manufacture alone yields support to a very large proportion of the dense population.

RIVERS, MOUNTAINS, AND RAILWAYS.—The principal river is the noble and pre-eminently useful Clyde, which is formed by the concentration of a number of straggling burns and rivulets rising amidst the mountains, and issuing from the waters which separate Lanarkshire from the counties of Peebles and Dumfries. The chief of these tributaries are the Powtrail water, the Crook burn, and the Evan and Elvan waters; these, coalescing, compose a stream that after flowing about two miles, receives an accession, first from Glengonar water, and next from Duneaton water, which constitute it properly the river Clyde, at a distance of upwards of twelve miles from the highest springs of its fountain. The Clyde flows in a longitudinal direction, in a winding course of more than sixty miles, dividing the county into two nearly equal parts, and ultimately falls into the Frith of Clyde, opposite to the Isle of Bute. It ranks amongst the largest rivers of Scotland, and is navigable for vessels of one thousand tons burden as far as the city of Glasgow. It waters and conduces to the fertility of delightful valleys, and in its progress forms several falls and cascades of a picturesque and romantic character—particularly 'the Falls of Clyde,' which, with the beautiful scenery around, possess an almost irresistibly attractive influence in the minds and over the feelings of visitors for pleasure, and admirers of natural lovliness. On either side, the grand river receives a variety of tributaries, all of them respectively of important advantage in their application to the machinery of manufacturing and agricultural mills: the most prominent of these secondary rivers within the shire, are the Douglas water, the Mouse, the Nethan, the Aven, the Calder, the North Calder, and the Kelvin; there are other minor streams, of still less magnitude and consequence, as the Elwin, the Little Clyde, the Cotten, the Logan, and the Avon. The greatest elevations of this county, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are—the Lowther Hills, 2,450, feet; Tinto, 2,236; Culter Fell, 1,700; Welstoun Mount, 1,550; Leven Seat, 1,250; and Dickmount Hill, 700. The numerous lines of rail which permeate this county have given such facilities for the transmission of its products and its wants, as to cause considerable changes in its character, and also in the relative position of a large portion of its population.

Divisions, Representation, &c.—Lanarkshire comprises (including the city parishes of Glasgow) forty-nine parishes and two parts of parishes, which form four presbyteries in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr; it contains three royal burghs—Glasgow, Lanark, and Rutherglen. The County returns one representative to the imperial legislature; the city of Glasgow elects two members; and the royal burgh of Lanark, in conjunction with Hamilton and Airdrie, in this county—Linlithgow, in the county of that name—and Falkirk, in Stirlingshire, contributes another member.

AIRDRIE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CLARKSTON, COATDYKE, CALDERBANK, CHAPELHALL, GLENMAVIS, WHITERIGG, MOFFAT, RAWYARDS, NEWHOUSE AND THE PARISH OF NEW MONKLAND, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AIRDRIE is a thriving town, one of considerable manufactures, and a burgh of barony, in the parish of New Monkland; 18 miles N.N.E. from Lanark, 31 miles W. from Edinburgh, and 11 E. from Glasgow; eligibly situated on the great or middle road between the two cities, and occupying a rising ground with its principal slope to the west. The advance of Airdrie has been very rapid, and it is now one of the most flourishing inland towns in Scotland: somewhat more than a century ago it consisted of but two or three farmhouses; it is now daily increasing in consequence and wealth, from the inexhaustible mines of ironstone and coal with which the neighbourhood abounds. The country is intersected in every direction by railroads, for the transmission of coal, &c. to the various ironworks, and to Glasgow; with which city, also, and the intermediate places, a communication is maintained by a passengers' train several times a day. There is also a line in course of construction (from Coatbridge to Bathgate) by the same company; it passes through the town, and will be the shortest route from Glasgow to Edinburgh; and the Monkland canal approaches within a mile and a half of the town. The Calder iron works are situated about mile and a half to the south-west, and the Monkland Steel Company's two miles and a half to the south. Exclusive of the iron and coal works, which employ a great many hands, no inconsiderable number are occupied in weaving for the manufacturers in Glasgow, as well as in the Airdrie cotton works, brewing is carried on extensively. Branches of the Bank of Scotland, the National, the Clydesdale, and the City of Glasgow Banks are settled here; the inns are respectable, and the shops for general supply are well stored with every necessary article for the demand of a busy population.

The burgh consists of one long principal street, through which the public road passes, with several branching and side streets and by-lanes; it is built on a regular plan, has many excellent houses, and is lighted with gas. It possesses a new town hall, which is ornamented with a spire and a clock; in the hall a justice of peace court sits, and a sheriff court, weekly. There is also a handsome pile called the County buildings, in which are the offices of the fiscal and other public functionaries. The increase of the town led to its being erected into a burgh of barony in 1821; and it is now governed by a regular bench of magistrates, composed of a provost, three baillies, and twelve councillors, with a treasurer and town-clerk: it unites with Lanark, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Falkirk in returning one member to parliament. There are three churches of the Establishment in the parish,—the parish church at New Monkland, one in Well Wynd, the other in Clarkston; the other religious edifices, will be found in a subsequent page. The town has several good schools, the principal of which is the Airdrie Academy, which was opened in 1849, and erected at the sole expense of the proprietor, at an outlay of upwards of £2,500. There are several useful and benevolent institutions in Airdrie; amongst these is an orphan society, for clothing and educating twenty-four children, and a horticultural society. In the neighbourhood are many neat modern villas and handsome residences; Airdrie House, a short distance to the west of the town, stands amidst some fine pleasure grounds. The market days are Tuesday and Saturday; fairs are held on the second Tuesday in February, the last Tuesday in May, the fourth Tuesday in August, and the third Tuesday in November.

WITH CULTER, SYMINGTON, TANKERTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BIGGAR is a small town in the parish of its name, 28 miles from Edinburgh, 36 S.E. from Glasgow, 16 W. from Peebles, and 12½ S.E. from Lanark, situate on the road between the two last-named towns. The town, which consists principally of a spacious and tolerably neatly built main street, was created a baronial burgh by charter of James II., to Sir Robert Fleming, of Biggar, in the fifteen century. It greatly owes its prosperity to a large and populous neighbourhood, the buildings are handsome, and the shops are well laid out, the whole being lighted with gas by a company formed in 1839. The new line of railway, which has been long projected and much required, is now in course of construction from Symington station, on the Caledonian line of railway, to the town of Biggar. During the present year (1859) it is expected to be open for traffic. The chief employment of the inhabitants is weaving for the Glasgow houses. Nail making is carried on to some extent; and there are few good inns. There are three banking establishments.

In 1545, Lord Fleming founded and endowed a collegiate church here for a provost, eight prebends, four singing boys and six poor men; it was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and built in the form of a cross in a plain Gothic style: this ancient place of worship is now the parish church, and is the only object worthy of attracting the notice of the stranger. Tradition reports a bloody engagement to have taken place near this town, between the Scots, under Wallace, and the English army, when that distinguished leader drove the latter into a morass, where most of them perished. The parish is six miles in length by three and a half in breadth, having the river Clyde on its western boundary, Peeblesshire on the east, and the parish of Covington on the west. The weekly market is held on Thursday; and the fairs on the last Thursday of January and October; third Thursday of July (old style), and last Thursday in April.

POST OFFICE, BIGGAR, Robert Glen, Post Master—Letters arrive from ENGLAND, IRELAND, &c., every morning at twenty minutes before seven; from EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, and the NORTH OF SCOTLAND every night at twenty minutes before eight; and are despatched for EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, and the NORTH OF SCOTLAND every morning at twenty minutes past five; for ENGLAND, IRELAND, &c., every evening at twenty minutes past six.

Money Orders are granted and paid here.

BLANTYRE AND CAMBUSLANG.

BLANTYRE is a small ancient village, in the parish of its name; eight miles N. by E. from Glasgow, and between three and four from Hamilton; situate on the road between the last-named town and Kilbride, and in a rich fertile district in the middle ward of the shire—the parish having a front to the Clyde of about two miles and a half, and extending six miles in length. In the village are very extensive cotton mills belonging to Messrs. Monteith & Co., which employ many hands, and is the only branch of manufacture in the district. In the parish is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur; the water is of a similar quality to that of St. Bernard's well, near Edinburgh, it was formerly much resorted to, and is still efficacious in the cure of scrofulous and scorbutic cases. On the south bank of the Clyde, directly opposite to Bothwell Castle, on a rocky eminence, stand the ruins of the once splendid priory of Blantyre, founded early in the thirteenth century. At the reformation the priory was demolished, and its revenues, with the patronage of the parish church, were given by James VI. to Walter Stewart, afterwards lord treasurer of Scotland, and created a baron in 1606, with the title of Lord Blantyre. The family is distinguished in both Scottish and British history.

CAMBUSLANG is a small parish, about three miles square, lying on the bank of the Clyde, with Blantyre on the east, Kilbride on the south, and Rutherglen on the west. The kirk, which is about four miles and a half from Glasgow and six from Hamilton, prior to the reformation belonged to a prebend of Glasgow cathedral; there was also, at that time, a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary; in 1565, the chaplain, Sir John Miller, made grants of the property endowed for its support; these lands are still called 'Chapel lands.'

CARLUKE AND BRAIDWOOD.

CARLUKE is a small town and burgh of barony in the parish of its name, 32 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 20 S.E. from Glasgow, 10 S.E. from Hamilton, and 5 N.W. from Lanark. The parish, which lies on the south-east bank of the Clyde, is said to derive its name from St. Luke; to whom its old parish church was dedicated—the adjacent Car signifying a strength or castle; the former was ruinous before the reformation, and of the latter no traces remain to mark its site. The town contains several regular streets. Kirkton-street contains a number of handsome stone buildings, and is lighted with gas. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, one each for United Presbyterians, Original Seceders, Congregationalists, and Roman Catholics; and also a number of schools. Few districts are richer in minerals of coals, ironstone and limestone, than that of Carluke. In 1836-7 extensive works were erected by the Shotts Iron Company; they are situate about a mile north of the town, and consist of three blast furnaces, with steam engine in connexion, of the aggregate power of 140 horses. The coal, ironstone and limestone are respectively of the best quality. The trade of the town and neighbourhood is chiefly confined to mining. Two branch bank establishments are settled here, the British Linen Company's Bank and the City of Glasgow; also a well-conducted savings' bank, which has greatly encouraged industry and provident habits among the inhabitants at large. Thre are also two steam corn mills in the vicinity. The banks of the Clyde have long been famous for the culture of fruit trees. Apples and pears are produced in great abundance, and in higher perfection in this district than in any other in Scotland. The margin of the river is adorned with many beautiful mansions, and tastefully arranged pleasure grounds, and the beauty of the woodland scenery in this part is justly admired. That profound mathematician, Major-General William Roy, was a native of this parish. Fairs are held on the 21st May and 31st October. There is also a great cattle show held here yearly, on the last Wednesday in July.

BRAIDWOOD is a small village in the same parish as Carluke, two miles from that town, situate about half a mile to the right of the road leading to Lanark. A little to the north-west of the village is Braidwood House, a handsome stone mansion, and about half a mile nearer the Clyde is a fine specimen of ancient architecture, apparently of the eleventh or twelfth century, consisting of a tower and keep in good preservation; but of the origin or uses of the structures tradition and history are alike silent. The building, which is overgrown with ivy, and partly inhabited, is called by the country people Ha'-bar (Hall-bar.)

POST OFFICE, Kirkton-street, CARLUKE, John Smith, Post Master.—Letters from EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, LONDON, and the NORTH, arrive every morning at twenty minutes before seven; and are despatched at twelve noon, and in the evening at twenty minutes past seven.

CARNWATH AND CARSTAIRS.

WITH DOLPHINGTON, DUNSYRE, NEWBIGGING, WILSONTOWN, FORTH, BRAEHEAD, AUCHINGRAY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CARNWATH is a village (or small town) and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name, 25 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 27 E.S.E. from Glasgow, 7 N. from Biggar, and the same distance E. from Lanark, situate on the main road between the latter town and Edinburgh. It consists of one street, nearly half a mile in length; about the centre is the tolbooth, a plain old building, in front of which is the cross, an obelisk, whereon the distances from Edinburgh to various places in Clydesdale and Ayrshire are distinctly marked. The houses, which are neat slate-roofed dwellings, have considerably augmented in number of late years. The inhabitants are employed, some in hand loom weaving, and others in agriculture. Sir N. M'Donald Lockhart, Bart., of Lee and Carnwath, is superior of the burgh; Mr. S. Gray, of Lanark, writer, is the baron baillie. The estate is held of the crown, on payment of a pair of red hose, which are run for annually on the day succeeding the August fair, and followed by athletic games, to the successful competitors for superiority in which are awarded medals and prizes in money.

The church, a modern erection, stands at the western end of the town, contiguous to a fragment of the ancient edifice, which, prior to the reformation, belonged to the cathedral of Glasgow: the stone frame of the north window is still entire, and presents a fine specimen of masonry in the Gothic style; another portion of the old building is now used as a sepulchre by the Lockhart family; it contains the remains of the former lords of the manor, the Somervilles, and a tomb on which a Lord Somerville is represented lying in complete armour, along with the figure of his wife, in the exact costume of the fifteenth century. About a mile to the north-west of Carnwath are the shattered ruins of Cowdailly Castle, in former ages the seat of the Somervilles. The market, which is on Friday, is principally for meal. Fairs are held on the last Friday in March (new style), for hiring servants; the first Thursday in July (old style), for horses and cattle; the second Wednesday in August (old style), for horses, cattle and sheep; and the second Wednesday in November (old style) for hiring servants.

CARSTAIRS is a small village in the parish of its name, situate on the road from Edinburgh to Lanark, four miles east of the latter town, and three west of Carnwath. This was evidently a place of some consequence in the time of the Romans, from the number and magnitude of architectural and other remains of that people which have frequently been turned up when digging below the surface. The cottages of this rural village have a remarkably neat appearance, being tastefully adorned with shrubs and flowers at the expense of the proprietor of the place. At some short distance from the village, embosomed in thriving plantations, is Carstairs House, the family mansion of Monteith, of Carstairs. The three fairs which were formerly held here, having gradually declined, are now altogether discontinued.

DUNSYRE (from dun-syrth, a steep hill), is a rural parish bounded byOlphington and Walston on the south, and Carnwath on the west and north west. The district lies high, and is chiefly devoted to pasture. The village, with the parish church, stands in the south part of the parish, on the high road. From the twelfth century to the reformation the parish was a rectory of the monks of Kelso.

COATBRIDGE,

WITH THE PARISHES OF OLD MONKLAND, CADDER, AND SHETTLESTON; ALSO THE VILLAGES OF BAILLIESTON, GARNKIRK, GARNQUEEN, TOLCROSS. AND CHRYSTON.

COATBRIDGE is a populous village in the parish of Old Monkland, situated on the Glasgow and Edinburgh road, eight miles east from Glasgow, and two miles west from Airdrie, although but a few years ago this place was of trifling importance, yet by its local advantages, which consist in abundance of coal and ironstone, it has now become very populous, and its well-stored shops and busy streets give it the appearance of a thriving town. The Monkland and Caledonian Railways pass through the village, as does the Monkland canal, and they add very considerably to the wealth of the locality, by affording ready transit to its productions. In the vicinity are six establishments for the manufacture of iron, viz., the Gartsherrie, the Calder, the Dundyvan, the Carnbroe, the Langloan, and those of Summerlee, all of which are on an extensive scale and afford employment to large numbers of the inhabitants; there are five establishments for the manufacture of malleable iron. This branch of the irontrade is still considerably on the increase in the neighbourhood. The manufacture of iron tubes is carried on very extensively here, and the Caledonian Patent Lap Welded Tube Company (of which Mr. Baker is now the proprietor) have premises replete with every convenience for the manufacture of their patent iron tubes. There are two other firms in the same business, and also four iron foundries. The Union Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. There are places of worship for various denominations.

OLD MONKLAND parish extends from the right bank of the Clyde to the border of New Monkland, a distance of between seven and eight miles, by a breadth near the Clyde, of little more than one, but afterwards expanding to nearly four miles. It is bounded on the north by Cadder and the barony parish of Glasgow, and on the south by Bothwell. This is one of the most productive parishes in Lanarkshire; it is well enclosed, cultivated, and until commerce, that sore destroyer of sylvan beauty, made such rapid strides, was one of the most beautiful and finely planted in the county. At Tolcross, in this parish, are the Clyde Iron Works and extensive collieries, the property of Colin Dunlop, Esq. The whole of this parish is rich in minerals, and it is one of the most important in the kingdom in that respect.

CALDER or CADDER parish extends along the northern boundary of Lanarkshire, having Kirkintilloch and New Monkland on the east, New Kilpatrick on the west, Campsie on the north, and the barony parish of Glasgow on the south. Great improvements have been made in this district in agriculture. This progressive benefit has been accelerated by the great canal between the Forth and the Clyde, which passes through the parish for five miles, whilst the river Kelvin washes its northern boundary to the extent of six miles. The Monkland and Caledonian Railways pass through the parish. The discovery of coal on the estate of Calder, and coal and very valuable fire-clay on that of Garnkirk has materially enhanced the price of land.

GARNKIRK, in the parish of Calder, is situate on the Caledonian Railway, about six miles from Glasgow, this place is important from the Garnkirk Fire Clay Works (known as the Garnkirk Coal Company) being situated here. This is perhaps the largest and most complete manufactory of fire clay in Great Britain. There are about 500 men employed in mining and manufacturing the material, and in connection with it there are extensive lime workings, for the supply of the neighbouring iron works. The quality of the fire clay on this property is considered quite equal to that of Stourbridge, and the bricks, furnace blocks, retorts and crucibles find their way in large quantities to all parts of America, Germany, Holland and Russia. The manufacture of glazed pipes for water and sanitary purposes, and of ornamental articles, such as chimney cans, vases, and fountains, is also extensively carried on at this establishment. There are likewise two other extensive establishments engaged in the manufacture of articles as above described, viz., Messrs. Ferguson, Miller and Company, at Heathfield, and Messrs. Hurll, Young, and Company, at Cardowan.

GARNQUEEN is a station on the Monkland Railway. Here, at the Glenboig Works, adjoining the station, fire clay and fire bricks are extensively manufactured, as is also Roman cement. Fire bricks are also manufactured at Gartverrie, one mile distant, and in this vicinity coal is also plentifully obtained. At Robroyston Sir William Wallace was betrayed into the power of Edward I., through the jealousy of the Scottish lords.

SHETTLESTON is a considerable village in the parish of its name, one mile from Tolcross, situate on the high road from Glasgow to Edinburgh. There are numerous collieries in this parish.

DOUGLAS AND RIGSIDE.

DOUGLAS, a village of great antiquity, is 40 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 31 S S E. from Glasgow, 15 N. from Leadhills, 12 S. from Lanark, and 8 S. from Lesmahago; situated nearly in the centre of the parish of its name, on the south side of the Douglas water, and on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr. The parish of Douglas takes its name from the stream that flows through it—the British words Dhu glas, signifying the 'dark blue stream;' and this is descriptive of the colour of the water. From such an etymology is derived the once dreaded and still noble name of Douglas (of this ancient family copious and interesting particulars will be found in Messrs. Chambers' 'Gazeteer.') In the vicinity of the village, on the bank of the river, stands Douglas Castle, surrounded by extensive plantations. The old castle of Douglas was burned down in 1760: the following year the present edifice was begun to be erected in a magnificent style, from a plan by the late architect Adam; but only a part of the original splendid design has as yet been completed.

The village consists of several narrow irregular streets, formed (without any regard to order), on uneven ground; near the centre, in the village burial-place, stands all that remains of the ancient parish church: in a vault belonging to the original structure, are to be seen monuments of some of the great chiefs of the house of Douglas; several of these highly merit the investigation of the curious in sepulchral sculpture. Besides the parish church, there is a Free church, an United Presbyterian, and a number of schools. The village is well lighted with gas. The inhabitants in general are employed in hand-loom weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers. The parish throughout is well stored with limestone, freestone, and coal; of the latter mineral, there are inexhaustible seams; many of which are seven feet thick. The district is well watered; besides the Douglas, there are three minor streams, which merge in that river previous to its falling into the Clyde, about seven miles below the village. Fairs are held on the third Friday of March, the first Friday after Whitsuntide, the third Friday in October, and the first Friday after Martinmas, for hiring servants; the second Wednesday in June, for shearers; and the second Friday in August, for horses, of which there is always a large show.

RIGSIDE is a small village in the parish of Douglas, four miles north therefrom, situated on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr. In its neighbourhood are several collieries; it also abounds with rich and productive beds of ironstone, limestone, and fire-clay.

GLASGOW

AND ITS ENVIRONS,

WITH GOVAN, PARTICK, MARYHILL, SPRINGBANK, LAURIESTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE City of Glasgow, like many other important places, has no authentic record concerning the date of its origin, or the etymology of its name. There is however, sufficient reason for believing that the Scottish western metropolis was a place of considerable importance, during the time the Romans retained their acquisitions in Scotland; the name Glasgow is admitted to be Gaelic, but the interpretations of its meaning are both varied and discordant. Little doubt its existence as a Scottish town is traceable to the foundation of that religious society out of which the venerable cathedral took its rise. Its present magnitude, beauty extensive manufactures and commerce sufficiently indicate the early vitality and energy of its inhabitants. In point of commercial greatness, Glasgow may be reckoned the second city in the empire; it is in the county of Lanark, situated on the banks of the Clyde; 397 miles from London, 44 from Edinburgh, 137 from Aberdeen, 34 from Ayr, 29 from Stirling, 213 from Manchester, the same distance from Liverpool, 95 from Carlisle, 196 from Dublin, and 127 from Belfast. This distinguished city, in addition to its other claims on our regard, is entitled to respect for its venerable age: more than 1,300 years it has already numbered, and and, unlike the myriads of sons and daughters to whom it has given birth, its beauty and vigour have augmented with its age. St. Kentigern, or Mungo, was the reputed parent, who founded a bishopric on the site of the future city, in the year 560; the tomb of this saint is still shewn in the cathedral. John Achaius, who had been invested with the crozier about the year 1124, erected the present cathedral, which was consecrated in 1133. Some years after this, William the Lion elevated the rising town to the rank of a royal burgh, with the privilege of an eight days' fair and a weekly market. In 1268 the mace was borne before a provost and bailies, and a seal was allowed them distinct from that of the bishop and chapter. In 1345 Stockwell-street bridge was built, at the joint expense of Bishop Rae and Lady Lochow. Prior to this period the principal street was Drygate; some small tenements near the head of this street once formed part of the town mansion of the noble family of Montrose; Rotten-row was then also one of the chief streets. In 1450 the city and barony of Glasgow were raised by James II, at the supplication of Bishop Turnbull, into a regality; in consequence of this proceeding, the bishops therefore obtained the nomination of the civil authorities. Bishop Turnbull, next year, induced Pope Nicholas V, to issue a bull for the erection of a university; Rotten-row was the original site, but, eight years afterwards, Lord Hamilton bequeathed a tenement and four acres of land, on the north side of Blackfriars church, where the college now stands. In 1484 the Tron church was built; this edifice was destroyed by fire in 1793. The endowment of the university contributed essentially to the enlargement of the town—yet, several years subsequently, the inhabitants did not exceed 1,500 in number; the majority resided in the neighbourhood of the cathedral, and about the precincts of the bishop's palace; but as population increased, the habitations gradually extended towards the Cross. On the formation of the society of fishers, the Saltmarket soon gave convenient access to the Clyde; this humble community built Bridgegate (then called Fishergate), and appears to have been the first commercial company established in the city—fish, chiefly salmon, then being the staple of its trade. In 1527 the streets of Glasgow were stained with the blood of two martyrs to the principles of the Reformation, Jeremiah Russell and John Kennedy, the latter a youth of eighteen years of age: their deaths rather accelerated than retarded the progress of the opinions they had avowed; forty-five years after that event, the High Church was opened as a Presbyterian place of worship; but in 1662 episcopacy being restored and enforced by the bayonet, the persecutions of the Presbyterians became as fierce as when impelled by the intolerance of popery; and an inscription on a stone placed in a wall beyond the infirmary records the names of three of its victims—James Nisbet, James Lawson, and Alexander Wood, who, in 1684, 'were martyred for their adherence to the word of God and Scotland's covenanted reformation.' These sanguinary efforts to establish prelacy continued, with more or less violence until the happy revolution gave permanence to the presbytery. In 1638 was made the first purchase of land for the formation of a public green; but it was not till 1773 that the entire plot (described elsewhere) became the property of the city. During the rebellion of 1715, the citizens of Glasgow displayed great zeal in the cause of the reigning family: they despatched six hundred men, at their own expense, to join the royal army; and a ditch round the town, twelve feet broad and six feet deep, was commenced, but the speedy overthrow of the Stuart faction dispensed with the necessity for its completion. In 1763, James Watt, who was educated in Glasgow, withdrew to a private room near the Broomielaw, and during his seclusion, with a single assistant, commenced those experiments that issued in such momentous results. Forty-nine years afterwards, the unpatronised Henry Bell, of Helensburgh, launched his little 'Comet' on the Clyde — the first steamboat which plied on any water, and proved its independence of wind and tide. The 12th March, 1782, was memorable for the extraordinary height of the tide; the Clyde rose upwards of twenty feet above its usual mark, and completely insulated the village of Gorbals. In 1809 the battle of Corunna proved fatal to one of Glasgow's valiant sons, Sir John Moore, whose statue, together with those of James Watt and Sir Walter Scott now ornament George-square. The gorgeous banquet given to Earl Grey, in 1832, in gratitude for the boon he conferred on Scotland by the Reform Bill, kindled extraordinary enthusiasm in the city.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF GLASGOW AND ITS INSTITUTIONS.

The river Clyde divides the city into two unequal parts, that portion occupying the northern bank being the chief; this comprehends the old and new towns, with the suburbs of Calton, Bridgeton, Anderston, Brownfield, and Finnieston; the division on the opposite side of the river consists of the barony of Gorbals; including Hutchesontown, Laurieston, Tradeston, and Kingston. The communication between these two divisions of the city is by five bridges, three of which are of stone and there are two suspension bridges: that at the end of Jamaica-street, called Glasgow-bridge, is conspicuously elegant, it consists of seven arches, and the curvature is so very trifling that the transit by it is attended with no inconvenience. The noble quay, which extends from this bridge in a westerly direction to a great distance, is named the Broomielaw; and it is here that the vessels by which this part of the river is crowded, discharge and take in their cargoes. A commodious shed ranges along the greater part of the line of the quay; and (owing to the admirable regulations established, and the commanding width of the line), notwithstanding the prodigious amount of business transacted, the operations of the port are accomplished without confusion or noise, and with surprising celerity. On the 9th of April, 1851, the foundation stone of the Victoria-bridge was laid by the Duke of Athole, and a gorgeous municipal and masonic procession gave eclat to this memorable event. The Suspension bridge, between Glasgow bridge and the Victoria, for foot passengers, gracefully diversifies the pontine communications between the north and south sections of the city; it is one of the finest bridges in Europe, with a span of 420 feet, the chains rest on handsome piers, with columns of the Grecian Ionic character in cast iron. The southern bank of the river now rivals its competitor on the northern side, its wharfs, sheds, and shipping being nearly as commodious and animated; and the former village of Gorbals has grown into a noble and extensive town. The river, between the opposite quays, has not only been widened but it is progressively being deepened through the instrumentality of dredging machines, so that ships of upwards of 1,000 tons burthen now discharge at the Broomielaw. The city is greatly indebted to the late Mr. Spreull, who, during the period he held the office of city chamberlain, exerted himself for the accomplishment of this important object: the present spirited river trustees are vigorously acting upon his suggestions. The mud raised by the machine is conveyed down the Clyde in flats, and spread where the shore is low and swampy, by which process the banks of the river are raised, and a rich soil is deposited. A diving bell is also employed, as an assistant in the subteraqueous operations.

The main line of street running east and west, is nearly two miles in length, and eighty feet wide, assuming at different points the names of Gallowgate, Trongate, and Argyle-street. Noble houses and handsome shops, with few exceptions, range on both sides throughout the entire line. The street which runs from north to south is about a mile in length and fifty feet broad, bearing successively the names of Castle-street, Kirk-street, High-street, and the far-famed Saltmarket, anciently the abiding place of 'Baillie Nicol Jarvie, and mony mair baillies.' The point of intersection of these two lines is called the Cross, and may be termed the nucleus of the city. Here stand the Town Hall and the Tontine Coffee-room (or old Exchange) with a fine piazza in front; opposite to which is an equestrian statute of King William III, presented to the city, 1736, by James M'Crea, Esq. then governor of Madras, and a native of Glasgow. Parallel with Argyle-street, towards the north, are three other splendid streets, named Ingram-street, St. Vincent-street, and George-street, crossed by others of uniform elegance. But Buchanan-street, which passes in a northern direction from Argyle-street, opposite St. Enoch-square to the station of the Caledonian railway, is the handsomest business street in the city. Parallel with this is Queen-street, in which stands the Royal Exchange, with the equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington in front, unsurpassed for grace of style and truthfulness of expression. Sauchiehall-street, which runs from Buchanan-street westward nearly a mile, by the elegant erections at the western end, ranks among the finest streets in the city, the shops on the southern side are very handsome and attractively stored. The architectural taste displayed in the western section of the city is of the first order, to which the two fine squares, George and Blythswood, add a graceful magnificence. Blythswood-square occupies an elevated site, and the superior style of the mansions around it indicate that this neighbourhood has been adopted as a favourite place of residence by the opulent. The houses are all of stone, and the construction and arrangement of the streets impart to this vicinity a resemblance to a portion of Bath—several superb crescents adjacent strengthening the similitude. The old town lies to the east of the Trongate, extending to the Clyde on the south, and to the cathedral on the north. At the back of the cathedral is a rocky eminence called the Merchants' Park, upon the summit of which, on a fluted Doric column, fifty-eight feet high, is placed a colossal statue of the illustrious Scottish reformer, John Knox; appropriate inscriptions are sculptured on the four sides of the pedestal; this proud monument, so attractive from its position and magnitude, was raised in the year 1825. Contiguous to this is another, similar in character but of inferior dimensions, erected more recently, to the memory of M'Gavin, the formidable opponent of popery, and author of 'The Protestant' The statue of Knox is 250 feet above the level of the Clyde, and is a conspicuous object at a great distance; the artist was Mr. Forrest, of Lanark—the likeness was taken from an original painting in the Glasgow University, The surrounding grounds have been tastefully planted' and formed into a cemetery, named the 'Necropolis, and the stranger will be highly gratified by a visit to this interesting spot. The view from the summit of the hill is pleasing and commanding, access to it is by a handsome bridge, beneath which is a waterfall. The monument to Lord Nelson, on Glasgow Green, is a simple obelisk, 143 feet in height, surrounded by a protecting railing; the four sides of the pedestal record the birth, achievements and death of this naval hero, and the fact of this being the first memorial, sculptured to his memory impresses a high idea of the public spirit of the citizens. The 'Green,' of which it is so conspicuous an ornament, is Glasgow's pride; neither encroachment nor injury, can be committed upon it with impunity; its motto is the same as that of the national thistle,—'Nemo me impune lacessit.' This delightful promenade, from its extent, its verdure, and its plantations, may be denominated a park, the Clyde washes its southern margin, the prospect towards the south-east is beautiful and extensive — woods and villas in the foreground, and the hill of Dychmont, with the loftier and more distant one of Tinto, in the distance. Here, during the summer months, may be witnessed the national game of golf, and often is the Green animated by military evolutions. The delightful sward is, however, appropriated to usefulness as well as pastime—Scotia's bonnie lassies frequently convert a portion of it into a bleaching ground, for contiguous to this recreative rendezvous is the public washing-house, in which every convenience is provided for the detersive process; there are other similar establishments in different quarters of the city. Statues of Her Majesty and of Sir Robert Peel add two additional embellishments to this city. The statue of Sir John Moore (who was a native of Glasgow) stands in the centre of George-square, and is much admired as a work of art. Conspicuous amidst the throng of elegant buildings which adorn the City of Glasgow are the Banking Establishments, many of which are architecturally beautiful, and all are proud testimonials to the commercial enterprise of this port, of which they are representatives. There are several corn mills in and around Glasgow, upon a scale of great magnitude. No stranger can perambulate Glasgow without noticing its admirable pavement. The material being granite of almost indestructible hardness, Glasgow may be deemed one of the best paved cities of Europe. The city is plentifully supplied with good and cheap gas by two extensive companies—the Gas Light Company, Virginia street, established in 1817, and the City and Suburban Gas Company, Miller-street, formed in 1843.

The Glasgow New Water Works:—The works lately inaugerated by Her Majesty at Loch Katrine are on a scale which makes them important as an engineering feat even in these days of Great Easterns and Saltash Viaducts. Between Loch Katrine and the Mugdock Service Reservoir, eight miles from Glasgow, there are 13 miles of tunnelling, 3¾ miles of iron piping, and 9¾ miles of aqueduct. There are in the whole work 70 distinct tunnels, upon which 44 vertical shafts have been sunk for facilitating and expediting the completion of the work. The first tunnel commences immediately upon the aqueduct leaving Loch Katrine. It is 2,325 yards in length, 600 feet below the summit of the hill, and has been worked in addition to the open ends by 12 shafts, 5 of which are nearly 500 feet deep. This tunnel is through gneiss and mica slate. The last tunnel is at the southern extremity of the aqueduct, just before it enters the service reservoir. It is 2,650 yards in length, almost wholly through whinstone, at a depth of 250 feet below the summit of the hill. Besides these, which are the two longest tunnels, there are, at intermediate places, others of 700, 800, 1,100, and 1,100 yards in length. The rock tunnelled through was in many parts of the most obdurate description. For several miles along the side of Loch Chon, where the work passed through a succession of ridges of mica slate largely mixed with quartz veins, the progress did not exceed three lineal yards in a month, although the work was carried on day and night. In the Loch Katrine tunnel, and generally through the mica slate, the ordinary average progress was about five yards in a month. In drilling the holes for blasting the rock, in this district, with gunpowder, a fresh drill or chisel was required for every inch in depth upon the average. Not to speak of smaller constructions, there are 25 important iron and masonry aqueducts over rivers and ravines, some 60 and 80 feet in height, with arches of 30 feet, 50 and 90 feet in span; and, in addition to about 46 miles of new pipes within the city for distributing the water to the inhabitants, there are about 20 miles of large cast-iron pipes of 3 feet, 3 feet 6 inches, and 4 feet in diameter for conveying the water to the city. No less than 50,000,000 gallons will be obtained per day. The lakes appropriated to the purpose of the water works, and for the supply of the mill owners, fisheries, and other interests on the rivers from which water will be abstracted, are Loch Katrine, eight or nine miles in length, with a surface of 3,000 acres; Loch Venacher, four miles in length, with an area of 900 acres; and Loch Drunkie, with an area of about 150 acres; having altogether a water surface of upwards of 4 000 acres, and containing within the limits to which they may be raised or lowered about 1,600,000,000 cubic feet of water. The drainage area of Loch Katrine is 22,000 acres, and of Loch Venacher and Loch Drunkie 23,000 acres, making a total of 45,000 acres. On this the average fall of rain is between 70 and 80 inches per annum. That which falls on the collecting ground of Loch Katrine is about 80 inches, on the average of five years' observations. If all the water which flows from the rugged mountain sides into Loch Katrine were impounded, it would afford a regular daily supply of 80,000,000 to 90 000,000 gallons. The cost of the engineering works, exclusive of land, is between £600 000 and £700,000. The works were laid out and executed under the direction of Mr. Bateman, C.E., who was first consulted by the corporation as to the best means of obtaining an abundant supply of pure water for the city, in the year 1853. The act for the construction of the Loch Katrine works was obtained in 1855. Mr. Bateman had previously constructed the Manchester Water Works, an undertaking nearly as gigantic as that for the supply of Glasgow.

COMMERCE, TRADE AND MANUFACTURES.

Fishing was the earliest branch of productive industry established in Glasgow. Cured salmon was exported in large quantities to France, and different French productions were taken in exchange. In 1667 a whale fishing company was formed, and a soap manufactory established. The commercial prosperity of this city may be dated from its embarkation in the Virginian tobacco trade. The commerce of Glasgow was at first carried on in vessels chartered from English ports; although it is on record that this city was in possession of shipping prior to the year 1546, and in the reign of Charles II, the 'Leon' privateer was equipped here for a cruise against the Dutch. It was not until the year 1718, however, that a ship built on the Clyde, the property of Glasgow citizens, crossed the Atlantic; at that time a good supply of tobacco was brought to this market, and the merchants were enabled to dispose of that article upon more advantageous terms than those of London and other commercial towns in England, which produced great animosity between those parties; the English tobacco merchants charged those of Glasgow with frauds on the revenue. An inquiry was eventually brought before parliament, when a number of restrictions were imposed on the trade, which caused it to decline in Glasgow till the year 1735; it then began to revive, and at length attained such a degree of prosperity that, for several years previous to the American revolutionary war, the annual imports of tobacco into the Clyde were from 35,000 to 45,000 hogsheads; in the year immediately preceding that disastrous war, 57,143 hogsheads were imported; from 1,200 to 1,300 hogsheads, only, of the annual imports, were sold for home consumption—indeed this trade, at that period, engrossed nearly the whole capital and commercial enterprize of Glasgow. The manufacture of green glass bottles was introduced in 1730, but the demand was then so very limited, that, although the establishment was of but inferior magnitude, the workmen were employed in the glass-house only about four months in the year. The flint glass or crystal manufacture was established in the year 1777; it has been brought to a state of great perfection, and is successfully carried on in the vicinity of the city. Inkle wares were first manufactured here in the year 1732, and were not then made in any other town in Britain. A Mr. Alexander Harvey, of this city, brought away from Haarlem, at the peril of his life, two inkle looms and a workman, and in consequence the article was first manufactured in Glasgow. About the same date a manufactory of delph-ware was established here. The first print-field that appeared in this vicinity was at Pollokshaws, about the year 1742. The merchants and manufacturers of Glasgow, compelled to turn their attention to other objects when their favourite intercourse with America was interrupted by the war in 1775, began more generally to speculate upon the establishment of manufactures; the introduction of the muslin trade was the result, and it was prosecuted by men of capital with the greatest spirit and success. From the introduction of power-loom weaving, in 1773, or more correctly, from the application of steam power to cotton spinning, in 1792, the cotton trade and manufactures in Glasgow have been the principal means of creating its wealth, and advancing it to greatness, and so rapid has been the progress that now upwards of 50,000,000 pound's weight of cotton is annually consumed, and nearly 2,000,000 spindles and about 26,000 power-looms are in operation; most of the various fabrics produced from cotton are executed with astonishing celerity and perfection, and the dying and printing of linens and cotton keep pace with these affinitive improvements. A variety of other manufactures, viz. linens, bandanas; woollens, chemical works, turkey-red dying, &c., consecutively followed, and were pursued with activity and advantage. The iron trade has grown to be one of the staple trades of Glasgow, the cast, or pig iron works produce at the present time, at the rate of nearly 600,000 tons annually, and the malleable iron works 100,000 tons. To the list may now be added brass-working and type-founding, smallwares, damask manufacturing, tanning, sugar-refining, &c. all of which are carried on extensively either in the city or neighbourhood. In ship building, Glasgow deservedly holds a high position. Its building yards are both numerous and extensive, and the vessels constructed here, whether of timber or iron, have attained to a wide-spread celebrity. The Glasgow-built steam vessels are proud specimens of naval architecture. The merchants import, to a large amount, sugars, rum, wines, brandy, timber, coffee, cotton, flour, &c., and numberless other productions of the western world, particularly from Demerara, the Caraccas, Buenos Ayres, the United States, Canada, Nova Scotia, &c. Their commercial transactions likewise extend to the coasts of Asia and Africa, and are of considerable consequence in many of the ports of Europe. Their exportations comprise muslins, shawls, and every description of cotton goods, silks, glass, soap, whisky, and various manufactures of the neighbouring town of Paisley, as well as the products of the adjacent districts. The situation of Glasgow, surrounded by a rich coal-field, and supplied with that important mineral at an uncommonly cheap rate, with the facilities of conveyance by railway and water in nearly every direction, renders it an advantageous site for carrying on almost all kinds of manufactures.

The river Clyde, and the canal connecting this river with the Frith of Forth, being the channels through which the commerce of Glasgow is mainly conducted, it may be gratifying concisely to narrate a few circumstances illustrative of their navigation. (The momentous facilities for railway transit will be noticed hereafter.) In the year 1758, the first act passed for the improvement of the river, which created what is now called the 'the river trust.' The preamble of this act recites 'that the river Clyde, from Dumback to the bridge of Glasgow, is so very shallow in several parts, that boats, &c., cannot pass except at high water at spring tides,' and the act then empowers the 'trust' to scour, straighten, deepen, and improve the river, authorising them also to exact certain rates and duties for the same. The second act for improving the Clyde passed in 1770, the third in 1809, and the fourth and last in 1825—all of which authorised the improvement of the river by 'widening, straightening, and deepening,' and the levying of stipulated duties and rates, until ther iver made 'thirteen feet deep at mean tides in every part thereof,' and likewise to form new works for directing the stream, and to remove all obstructions, and when these purposes are fully accomplished, the rates are to be lowered in such proportions as may be conducive to the general interests of trade. The acts also empowered the trustees to borrow sums of money upon the security of the rates. In proof of the success that has attended the efforts of the river trust, vessels of more than 1,000 tons burthen can now come up to the Broomielaw, whereas, a very few years ago, none of greater burthen than 150 tons could reach it. Iron steam vessels are now being continually launched from the Clyde yards, which, for magnitude, speed and superb fittings, may challenge a comparison with any that float. The smaller steamers are almost countless, and the subjoined comparative statements will shew the extent and importance, which steam navigation has attained on the Clyde; the arrivals are at the Broomielaw only :—

At Blackhill was constructed, in 1850, an inclined plane for passing empty boats from one level to another of the Monkland canal; the apparatus is novel and ingenious, and the ease with which the boats are transferred is surprising.

Grangemouth is the port at the eastern entrance of the Forth and Clyde canal, through which sea-going vessels of considerable burthen, can pass to Glasgow or to the Firth of Clyde, and places beyond. The length of the canal to Glasgow is 29 miles, and to the Clyde 35 miles. The locks are 20 feet wide and 74 feet long, admitting vessels about 68½ feet in length, and little under 20 feet in breadth. The depth of water is fully 9 feet. The toll for passing on the canal is one penny per ton per mile for all articles except gunpowder. For the accommodation of vessels too large to enter the canal, capacious wet docks and other works have been recently provided, and there is now room for about 20,000 tons of shipping. The depth of water in the river Carron, between the port and the Frith of Forth, is about 20 feet at spring, and 15 feet at neap tides. The entrance to the docks is by a lock 250 feet long, and 55 feet wide, capable of admitting the largest class of steam ships at present used in the home trade.

Several important lines of railway have their termini in Glasgow, the principal ones are the Edinburgh and Glasgow, the Caledonian, the South Western, the Paisley and Greenock, and the Scottish Central, these, together with some minor lines, have brought Glasgow almost into proximity with the chief towns of Scotland and England, including their respective capitals, the reciprocal benefits accruing from which are manifested daily and increasingly.

This brief statement of the nature and extent of the commerce of Glasgow cannot be more appropriately closed than by a description of the Royal Exchange, which magnificent edifice stands on the western side of Queen-street. The principal entrance is by a grand portico of twelve fluted Corinthian columns, thirty feet high. After passing through a tasteful vestibule, the visitor enters the great reading-room, which is 120 feet long and 62 feet wide; the lofty roof is supported by a double row of columns nineteen feet high, each composed of a single stone. A dome, supported by twelve Corinthian pillars, surmounts the building. The great room is supplied with all the leading newspapers, and strangers are courteously allowed the privileges of the room upon subscribing their names. The numerous apartments below and above are appropriated to various commercial purposes. The Royal Exchange forms the centre of a splendid group of buildings, of which the branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is the chief; it is in the Ionic order, the portico is greatly admired for its classic proportions; Mr. Archibald Elliott, of London, was the architect, and Messrs. John and James Smith, the builders. Besides the public reading-room in the Royal Exchange, the 'Athenæum,' in Ingram-street, and the 'Tontine Exchange-room,' in Trongate-street have upon their tables the principal newspapers, British and foreign, and the popular periodicals, and access is afforded at very moderate charges; the 'Athenæum,' to ephemeral literature, has added all the appliances needful for the intellectual improvement of its members, both in literature and science. There is a 'Public Library,' in George-street, stored with many thousand valuable and well-chosen volumes. The 'Athenæum and Telegraphic News-room,' in Glassford-street, admits besides, upon payment of one penny, perusal of all the London, provincial and foreign newspapers, which are profusely supplied in the extensive suite of rooms. There is also 'Stirling's Library,' situated in Miller-street.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT, &c.

The 'Lord Provost' is the designation of the chief magistrate of Glasgow, who is styled honourable; the present Lord Provost is the Hon. Andrew Galbraith; the subordinate functionaries are five baillies, the dean of guild, and the deacon convenor. There are thirty-two councillors—six for each of the five districts into which the city is divided, and the dean of guild and deacon-convenor, who are councillors by virtue of their offices. The principal officers connected with the corporation are the treasurer, chamberlain, town clerks, master of works, baillie of the river and firth of Clyde and his depute, baillie of proven, procurator fiscal, and superintendent of streets and buildings. There are also two other bodies that exercise municipal privileges — the Merchants' House and the Trades' House: the dean of guild belongs to and is nominated by the former, and the convenor to the latter house, by which he is appointed. The different suburban burghs and the barony of Gorbals have each their respective local functionaries. The municipal buildings in Wilson-street form a splended group of Grecian architecture, in front is an Ionic portico, chastely proportioned; the facade is handsome, stately, and imposing. Internally, it contains a council hall (in which the municipal body hold their meetings), splendidly decorated; there are also the fiscal's chamber, the council record chamber, and other public offices, all elegantly fitted-up and beautified. Another hall, styled the Merchants' Hall, in Candlerigg-street, displays much grandeur, and so far as ornamentation is concerned, is regarded as the most magnificent in the city. The Trades' Hall, in Glassford-street, is a very handsome building, the front consists of a centre and wings, supported by a rustic basement, four Doric columns above support the entablature, and a dome, surmounted by a lantern, rises from the roof. The hall, one of the finest rooms in the city, is seventy feet long, thirty-five broad, and twent-four high, exclusive of the dome. On the walls and staircase are hung portraits of persons of the trades' rank that have conferred donations on the house, and also tablets recording the names of the convenors from 1605 to the present time. The City Halt, in Candlerigg-street, is a very spacious and handsome building, in which public meetings are commonly held. In Hope-street stands the Corn Exchange, a spacious and handsome structure, with a portico sustained by Corinthian fluted columns, the interior is fitted up in complete adaptation to the peculiar transactions of this important market, held every Wednesday. Hope street, for length and width and graceful buildings, ranks with the most conspicuous for beauty in Glasgow. The police are under the direction of the honourable the lord provost, the magistrates, dean of guild, deacon convenor, and thirty-five commissioners, one to each of the thirty-five wards into which Glasgow is sub-divided. There are several courts held within the jurisdiction of the city, the chief of which are the following:—the Dean of Guild Court, held every alternate Thursday, at eleven o'clock, takes cognisance of buildings and streets. The Sheriff Small Debt Court, for debts not exceeding £8. 6s. 8d., sits every Thursday at eleven, and has jurisdiction over the whole county of Lanark. The Justice of Peace Small Debt Court, for the Lower Ward of Lanarkshire, meets every Monday morning, atten, in the County Hall, to decide claims of £8. and under. The County Court sits every Wednesday for criminal offences, and Thursday, for the recovery of small debts. The River Baillie Court sits every Tuesday and Friday, and has marine jurisdiction between Glasgow Bridge and the Clough, near the mouth of the Clyde. The Sheriff Ordinary Court sits every Wednesday, at eleven, and the Burgh Ordinary Court every Friday, except during vacation, both adjudicate on causes of any amount, however large. The principal gaol, called the North Prison, is in Duke-street, which, unfortunately, it has been found necessary to enlarge, by the erection of a considerable compartment in the rear; debtors are confined in the west wing of this prison. The South Prison is in the rear of a commanding range of buildings, with its frontage towards the river, near the Victoria Bridge, there is a noble portico in the centre, composed of a double row of fluted columns. The justiciary hall is in the centre, arranged with the requisite conveniences for a court of justice. To the north is the borough court; the council chambers to the south, and the remainder of the floor is appropriated to the jurymen, clerks, and witnesses. The upper storey contains the lord provost's room, and other public apartments. The chief police office is in South Albion-street, and the supervision of the city by the efficient force under the direction of this office, is highly creditable to the various functionaries. The new Post Office, in George-square, adds another sumptuous edifice to the multitude that adorn Glasgow. Glasgow returns two members to parliament, the gentlemen now sitting are Walter Buchanan, Esq., of Shandon, and Robert Dalglish, Esq.

RELIGIOUS EDIFICES.

The Cathedral or High Church, ornaments the north-eastern termination of the city, and is one of the very few ecclesiastical structures of ancient Scotland that has withstood the withering influence of time, the assaults of religious fury, and the sapping of neglect; it arose in the early part of the twelfth century. John Achaius, Bishop of Glasgow, was its founder, and John Murdo its supposed architect, the reigning king being David I, who witnessed its consecration. A stone above the door of the choir tells us, in Latin, that it was dedicated in 1197, St. Mungo or Kentigern being invoked as its tutelar patron. The figure of the edifice is cruciform. From the centre of the building rises a square embattled tower, of lofty octangular form, from which springs a spire. At the western end of the church is another square tower, covered with a leaden pyramidal roof, within which is a clock and a bell. The entire building is arranged in four divisions, namely, the choir, the inner high church, the outer church, and the vaulted cemetery. one hundred and fifty-seven pillars and one hundred and fifty-seven windows combine to give support and illumination to the church. The cemetery beneath the nave, will excite in the visitor an appalling interest; the roof is supported by sixty-five pillars. In consequence of the elevated site of the cathedral the views from its battlements are very extensive and diversified. In the latter part of the year 1859, some of the windows were removed to give place to others of a more artistic character, these being ornamented in the most exquisite and highly finished style, and specimens of richly stained glass, with allegorial representations of becoming interest, and in harmony with the sacred edifice, were happily and appropriately introduced. The Barony Church, contiguous to the cathedral, was built in 1798, from a design of Mr. Adam; the parish connected with this church, is the largest in the city. The College, or Blackfriars Church, in High-street, is a plain building, erected in 1699, on the site of a more ancient pile, called Blackfriars, which, in 1666, was destroyed by a thunder-storm. The Tron, or Laigh Church, near the Cross, was erected in 1794, and is a plain building, surmounted by a cupola. A spire, built in 1637, stands between it and the street, having a clock and two bells. The name of 'Tron' was applied to this church from a part of its steeple having been used as a weigh-house. The clock-faces of this church are lighted externally by gas-lamps. Saint Andrew's Church, which stands in the square of the same name was completed in 1756, at an expense of £15,000., and resembles that of Saint Martin's in-the Fields, London. The architect was Mungo Nasmith. Saint Enoch's Church, was erected in 1780, from designs by Mr. Jaffray: the front, on which is the spire, is decorated with a Doric portico, and has a light and handsome appearance; it stands in St. Enoch's-square, and is a graceful terminating object from Buchanan-street. Saint George's Church, on the west-side of Buchanan-street, fronting George-street, is a handsome edifice, with three quarter Doric columns in front, the whole height of the church. The steeple is crowned with a dome and obelisk, and is one hundred and sixty-two feet high. This church was finished at an expense of £9,000. Saint John's Church, in Græme-street, is one of the largest places of worship in the city, affording sixteen hundred sittings: it was built during the residence here of Dr. Chalmers, whose pulpit oratory attracted large congregations. The exterior is of chaste Gothic. This church has a magnificent steeple, one hundred and thirty-eight feet high, containing a complete peal of bells. The Gorbals Church is situated at the east-end of Carlton-place, fronting the river: it was completed in 1810, from designs by Mr. D. Hamilton. The clock of this church, from its great elevation, is seen to a great distance. Saint David's Church, at the end of Candlerigg-street, is in the Gothic style, and was built from the designs of Messrs. Rickman and Hutchinson, of Birmingham. Circumstances having rendered it expedient to retain the shape and dimensions of the old church, it is built in the form of a cross, and is ornamented with a tower one hundred and twenty feet high, containing a complete set of bells. The vaulted cemetery beneath, is one of the most complete in the kingdom. The cost of the church was £7,000., but the sepulchres in the crypt sold for £4,000. The patronage of the city churches belongs to the magistrates and town-council, with the exception of those of the inner High church and the barony, which pertain to the Crown. The patronage of Gorbals church is with the heritors or feuars, who purchased it from the college. The stipends of the city clergy are £425. per annum, and those of the inner High church and the barony £500. The pew sittings are let annually.

Since the disruption in 1843, a large number of free churches have been erected, the particulars of which will be found in the appendix at the close of the 'Glasgow Directory;' many of these structures are highly decorative to the city. Saint John's, in George-street, is conspicuous for its ornate spire; and Saint Matthew's church situated at the west-end of Sauchiehall-street, with its lofty spire, is a graceful ornament to that aristocratic quarter of the town. The Free Church College, Lynedoch-place, was erected in 1856-7. The theological faculty consists of four professors, who are chiefly supported by endowments. The late Dr. Clark, of Wester Moffat, to whom the founding of the college is for the greater part indebted, left £400 a year for bursaries and scholarships, to the students attending it. The chapels of the United Presbyterians, the Episcopalians, and other dissenters from the establishment, are very numerous; and many of them are attended by large congregations. Those most conspicuous for architectural beauty are the following:—Greyfriars, North Albion street, United Presbyterian church, which is ornamented by a fine Grecian portico. Wellington-street chapel, in the same connexion, is a very tasteful structure, below which are numerous sepulchral crypts. Saint Mary's episcopal chapel, in Renfield-street, of modern erection, and that near St. Andrews-square, built in 1750, are both ornamental to their respective neighbourhoods. George-street Independent chapel, in which Dr. Wardlaw officiates, is a chaste specimen of the Grecian style, and is a conspicuous object from George-square; it was designed by Mr. Gillespie, of Edinburgh, and cost £10,000. A new Independent chapel has arisen in Holland-street, in the ornate Gothic style. The Baptists have six places of worship, the methodists four, and the Reformed Presbyterians two. The Roman catholic chapel, in Clyde-street, was erected in 1815; the style is pointed Gothic, light in its aspect, and rich in its embellishments. The chapel will contain more than two thousand persons, and is arranged within, in a style corresponding with its elegant exterior. Mr. Gillespie, of Edinburgh, furnished the design, and Mr. Smith, of Glasgow, was the builder. A list of all the other places of worship will be found at the end of the 'Glasgow Directory,' with the names of their ministers.

CEMETERIES.—Close to the cathedral is the Necropolis, one of the finest cemeteries in Britain. The approach to it is by a lofty bridge which spans the valley, through which the Molendinar runs. This bridge has rather appropriately been called the 'Bridge of Sighs.' The grounds, which are beautified with shrubberies, trees, flowers, and gravel walks, are also thickly adorned with monumental columns and statues tastefully executed and beautiful in design. Sighthill Cemetery, in the vicinage of St. Rollox, is of considerable extent, and is entered by a magnificent gateway, near to which is a handsome chapel. Hardie and Baird—political martyrs—have an obelisk erected here to their memory. The southern Necopolis, Rutherglen, is also neat in its arrangement of walks and flowers, and it has also many monumental adornments.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The Royal Infirmary, situate near the Cathedral, exhibits an exterior of considerable beauty, while the arrangements of the interior are skilfully adapted to their benevolent object. The building has been much enlarged since its first erection, the latest addition being for the reception of fever patients. The lowest story contains a laboratory, an apothecary's shop, hot and cold baths, and strong chambers for the temporary restraint of the insane. Beneath the dome is a spacious circular apartment, which is appropriated to surgical operations.—The Royal Lunatic Asylum, at Gartnaval, two miles west of the city, is a noble edifice, admirably constructed for the recovery and comfort of its unhappy inmates, no appliance is wanting that can minister to the attainment of these objects—a portion of the establishment is appropriated to pauper patients. There is a private 'Asylum for the Insane,' called Garngad House—the situation is beautiful.—The Town's Hospital, for paupers in the Parliamentary-road is a building strikingly original in its design. The centre is octagonal, with four wings diverging from it. The wings contain rows of commodious chambers, and a long gallery for exercise. This structure was erected as an asylum for lunatics, but these have been removed to the Royal Lunatic Asylum, at Gartnaval. The Poor House for the extensive barony parish at Barnhill, is a very capacious asylum for the children of poverty, and well adapted by its cleanliness, ventilation and position to mitigate the ills of their condition. The Deaf and Dumb Asylum, 36 Parson street, is plain in its aspect, possesses every adaptation for its interesting object. The Asylum for the Blind in Castle street, by a recent enlargement, has been rendered capable of accommodating more than one hundred inmates, who are advantageously employed in the fabrication of various useful articles; and the recent invention of printing in relief, by enabling the blind to read manipular or tangible letters, has given a most interesting facility to their education. The Magdalen Asylum, adjoining the town's hospital, was erected in 1812, from designs by Dr. Cleland, a gentleman to whom Glasgow owes many obligations. The accommodations are in every way suitable to the purpose for which it was built; and its benefactors have the satisfaction of believing that many of its female inmates have subsequently become permanently worthy of the protection that has been afforded them. The Lock Hospital, in Rottenrow st, was formed in 1805, for the cure of unfortunate females. Hutchinson's Hospital, in Ingram-street, was founded by the two brothers, George and Thomas Hutchinson, between the year 1639 and 1641: the former amassed a large fortune as a writer and notary, although his charges were so moderate, that, it is stated, he would never charge more than sixteen pennies Scots for the writing of a bond, however large the amount: the latter brother was a preacher. From the original endowment and subsequent benefactions, the trustees are enabled to appropriate £3,000 per annum to pensions for aged men and women, and for the education and partial clothing of poor boys, together with £3 per annum to the latter. The present building, erected in 1803, is ornamented with an octagonal spire, one hundred and fifty-six feet high. St. Nicholas's Hospital was founded by Bishop Muirhead, in the reign of James III., for the support of twelve aged men and a priest; the Archbishop Leighton, in 1677, added £150 for the benefit of two more: the funds of the institution, however, have suffered considerable diminution. The Female Orphan Institution, Slatefield House, Gallowgate, is for the reception of poor orphan and destitute girls, who are educated, clothed, and maintained for £10. 10s. per annum, or, without clothing, for £8, which must be paid in advance. The Eye Infirmary, 76 Charlotte-street and 95 Greendyke st, is liberally supported, and has been successful in its operation. A very extensive bequest has been recently made by the late John Ferguson, Esq., of Cairnbrock, for charitable, religious, and educational purposes.--In addition to the benevolent institutions already enumerated, there exist many others, which shed a lustre on the memories of departed citizens of Glasgow. Mitchel's mortification, made in 1729, yields £100 per annum to decayed burgesses and their families; and Tennant's, made in 1741, renders to three widows 80 merks, or £4. 18s. 10d., the remainder devolving on two of the General Session Charity Schools. Wilson's charity, founded in 1778, bestows education and clothing on forty-eight poor boys; and Millars, since 1790, has educated sixty girls annually, at a yearly expense of £300.

RELIGIOUS AND MORAL SOCIETIES.

Missionary effort in Glasgow commands, as it deserves, an extensive and encouraging sympathy, and in connection with the Religious Tract and Book Society, which we gladly give a brief notice of, will, it is trusted, continue to prosper. The object of the Religious Tract and Book Society, is to promote the diffusion of a healthy religious literature, especially among the humbler classes of the people, by the gratuitous distribution tracts, and the offering by the system of colporteurage, of periodicals of a sound religious character for sale, at the houses of those who might not be attracted to them at the ordinary book shops.—Other societies for religious objects are also very numerous, and are liberally supported. The "Glasgow association for establishing lodging houses for the working classes" is an interesting "sign of the times" we live in; the association have already purchased several plots of ground in airy localities, whereon to erect dwelling places, that shall be spacious, cleanly, and well ventilated, and these will be let at very low charges—the beds, from 3d. to 6d. a night.—There also several Bible Societies and Sabbath School Societies, besides the Young Men's Society for Religious Improvement.

INSTITUTIONS FOR EDUCATION, LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND THE ARTS.

The UNIVERSITY.—This venerable College presents its antiquated front on the eastern side of High-street. Entering by the centre gate, over which are the royal arms, the visitor finds himself in the first quadrangle, and he will not fail to notice the antique stone stairs leading to the Faculty hall, with their guardian lions, sejant on one side, and unicorn on the other: this hall contains many rare paintings, both historical and portrait; among the latter are those of Luther, Knox, Buchanan, Napier, and Smollet. The second quadrangle is much larger, surrounded on three sides by buildings, part of which are in the old monastic style, with low towers and curtains; while others of recent erection, are built in the modern style, the effect of which is distressing to good taste. These buildings contain the anatomical theatre, and rooms for the classes in Greek, logic, humanity, chemistry, medicine, and mathematics. The old library is an insulated building to the south-east; and the new one is at the south end of the anatomical theatre. The chapel, or common hall, is fitted up with considerable taste, and can accommodate nearly 1,000 worshippers. Rising over the entrance to the second quadrangle is the steeple, 135 feet high, which is protected from lightning by a conductor, erected in 1772, under the direction of the renowned Dr. Franklin. At the back of the College are spacious gardens, in which is placed the Macfarlane Observatory; and near the entrance to these gardens, forming the eastern termination to the College, stands the Hunterian Museum, an edifice pronounced by critics to be one of the most felicitous specimens of classical architecture in Great Britain. It was reared in 1804 from designs by Mr. Stark, the principal front forming a Roman Doric portico of six columns, behind which is a recess, separated by a second row of pillars. Beautiful as this portico is, the whole fabric is in harmony with it, combining graceful proportion of parts with simple elegance of form. This museum was bequeathed to the college by the celebrated Dr. Hunter, of London, who was a native of East Kilbride. The collection comprises specimens of natural history, anatomical preparations, paintings, books, and medals; the medals being estimated at £30,000, and the whole collection cost Dr. Hunter £100,000. The pictures are all from great masters; amongst many others are Titian, Guido, Domenichino, Rubens, and Rembrandt. The university was founded by Turnbull, Roman Catholic Bishop of Glasgow, in 1450-1. At the reformation Archbishop James Beaton fled before the triumphant presbyterians, carrying with him the charters and records, which he placed in the Scots College at Paris. James VI granted a new charter, and endowed the college with valuable property, since which it has risen to high reputation. The establishment consists of a lord chancellor, lord rector, dean of faculty, and principal with professors of divinity, church history, oriental languages, natural philosophy, logic, Greek, humanity, civil law, medicine, anatomy, practical astronomy, Regius professors of natural history, surgery, chemistry, and botany, and a lecturer on materia medica. The Andersonian University, in George-st., founded by the late John Anderson, professor of natural philosophy in the University of Glasgow, on the 7th of May, 1795, and the following year, was incorporated by the magistrates and council. This University is placed under the superintendence of eighty-one trustees, and the lord provost is one of the inspecting visitors. The endowment consisted of a philosophical apparatus, a library, and museum; but the prosperity of the institution has been so great that the trustees have purchased the extensive pile of buildings formerly occupied by the grammar school, which were opened in 1828, and the numerous classes now receive a more extended education, including philosophy, science, and the arts. The museum is opened to the public from eleven to three, on the payment of sixpence. The High School, situate at the top of the hill behind the above university, is of an origin supposed to be coeval with the Cathedral, and within this Alma Mater several hundreds of youths acquire the elements of a liberal education. The Mechanics' Institution, North Hanover-street, owes its origin to a dispute among the managers of the Andersonian University, and it would be well if all quarrels terminated so beneficially. The useful class of persons that give name to this institution acquire, from competent lecturers, that species of knowledge which, in the first instance, elevates themselves, and will ultimately the nation to which they belong. Cowcaddens Mechanics' Institution, in Stewart-street, contains nearly 3,000 volumes of carefully selected works. The Calton, Mile-end, and Bridgeton Mechanics' Institution was instituted in 1833, for an object similar to that of the above, namely, improvement in the arts and sciences. Faculty of Physicians' and Surgeons' Hall. This ornamental building is situated in St. Enoch's square, within which the two incorporated bodies above named hold their meetings. The charter of their incorporation confers the right of granting diplomas, after examination, to students in medicine and surgery; and every person practising without such diploma in Glasgow, Renfrew, Dumbarton, Lanark, Kyle, Carrick, Ayr and Cunningham, is liable to a fine of £3. 8s. 6d. for each offence. The members of faculty enjoy the privilege of exemption from many imposts and irksome duties. The freedom fine of admission into the faculty is £150, and licentiates within the city or suburbs pay £20, but those in the country £5. 5*s.*: for the diploma of each student £5. 5*s.* is required. Every candidate for a diploma must produce evidence that he has studied three winter sessions, either at an university or under resident members of the college of physicians and surgeons of Edinburgh, London, or Dublin, or under the members of the faculty of physicians and surgeons in Glasgow; and that during that period he has attended public lectures on anatomy, surgery, chemistry, materia medica, the theory and practice of medicine, and midwifery; and that he has attended one year at some hospital, and studied pharmacy in an apothecary's or surgeon's shop for six months, without which he cannot be taken on trial. Candidates who have served an apprenticeship of three or more years must produce similar evidence. The faculty contribute to a fund, founded in 1792, for the support of their widows and children.—Faculty of Procurators' Hall, West George-street, near to St. George's Church, is a large building in the Venetian style, designed as a library and hall for the procurators. It forms one of the finest architectural embellishments of the city.—The educational institutions of Glasgow are very numerous, and are supported with creditable spirit; they are enumerated under the head of endowed schools, and in the list of public buildings, at the end. But the Ragged School which occupies a noble building in Rotten-row, merits special notice from its peculiar character and beneficial results, the pupils are mostly the offspring of dishonest and profligate parents, the children are fed as well as instructed.

PLACES OF AMUSEMENT.

The Theatre Royal is in Dunlop-street, and is, so far as architectural features are concerned, somewhat out of order. The interior is however sumptuously fitted up, and designed to be strikingly effective. The Prince's Theatre has two entrances, West Nile-street and Buchanan-street, this also is fitted up with much taste. The Queen's Theatre is in Green Dyke street. The Assembly and Concert Rooms were erected in 1796, and constitute a very elegant embellishment to Ingram-street: the wings were added in 1807. The Royal Botanic Garden, Great Western road, is highly deserving of inspection. The hot houses are extensive and well supplied with specimens of the floral and other vegetable productions of every tropical clime, including the far-famed Victoria regia, or water lily. Within this enclosure flourish more than 12,000 species of varieties of trees and shrubs, inclusive of coffee, cotton, tea, sugar, chocolate, cocoa, date, cinnamon, nutmeg, clove and bread fruit. Strangers are admitted on payment of sixpence, and the working classes free five days during the Fair week every year. There are several Music Saloons that are very attractive, conducted upon the plan of affording refreshments, enlivened by gratuitous amusements. The Argyle Arcade runs from Argyle-street to Buchanan-street, and contains attractive shops, covered in by a lofty roof of glass. There is a second Arcade in Sauchiehall-street, called the Wellington; and the Bazaar is situated in Candlerigg's-street. The public slaughter-houses are in Market-street, Scott-street, Milton-street, and Moore-street, Gallowgate. The chief market day for corn and provisions is Wednesday. There are five fairs in the year, viz., the second Wednesday in January, Thursday before Easter, last Monday in May, the whole of the second week in July, and the first Wednesday after Martinmas.

GOVAN is a picturesque village nearly 3 miles W. from Glasgow, on the north bank of the Clyde, it possesses a handsome church, belonging to the establishment, surmounted by a spire, in imitation of Stratford-upon-Avon. A free and an united Presbyterian church, and several schools are in the village, and there are three yards for the building of iron ships.

PARTICK is a village 3 miles N. W. from Glasgow, irregularly built but environed by agreeable scenery, there are several mills and factories and boat building yards in the place, The village contains an Established, a Free, and two United Presbyterian churches, and several schools.

MARYHILL a village 3 miles N. W. from Glasgow, is situated on the banks of the River Kelvin, which stream is crossed by the Forth and Clyde canal, by the medium of a noble aqueduct of lofty altitude; the village contains Established and Free churches, and a Roman Catholic chapel. On the banks of the canal is the ship building yard of Mr. David Swan. There are two print works, an iron foundry, a spinning mill, bleach-works and glass-works.
